U.S. embassy pair kidnaped

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two American Embassy officers were kidnaped today at a street barricade manned by fighters in Lebanon's religious and political war between Christians and Moslems.

They were identified by an embassy spokesman as Charles Gallagher, 44, of Roanoke, Va., and William Dykes Jr., 50, of San Jose Calif., the director and deputy director respectively of the U.S. Information Agency printing facility in Beirut.

The two were grabbed about 7 a.m. as they drove to work in an embassy car with diplomatic license plates, the spokesman said. There was no indication who the abductors were, he added.

Kidnaping has been a frequent weapon of right-wing Christians, left-wing Moslems and radical Palestine guerrilla supporters of the Lebanese Moslems. The two sides have been locked in street battles for the last seven months.

The two were stopped by unidentified armed men at a roadblock on the Corniche al-Mazraa, a broad avenue that leads from a high-class seaside neighborhood through Moslem districts. Two major Palestinian guerrilla groups have headquarters on the avenue.

A Lebanese employe who was with the Americans was released and brought word of the kidnaping to the Embassy.

The spokesman said there was no word from the kidnapers, but Embassy security officers were in touch with the Lebanese police.

Premier Rashid Karami received U.S. Ambassador G. McMurtrie Godley after getting word of the abduction.

It was the first known case of Americans resident in Beirut being kidnaped or killed during the 7-month-old street war between Lebanon's private Moslem and Christian militias.

Col. Edward R. Morgan of the U.S. military aid mission in Turkey was kidnaped last June 29 by radical Palestinian guerrillas during earlier fighting in Beirut. He was released unharmed on July 12 after the Lebanese government distributed food supplies in a poor district of the city.

Sniping delayed enforcement of an agreement to demilitarize three battle fronts in the street war today, but the government radio reported a "marked improvement" in security conditions.

"There are fewer unsafe roads in the city and the outskirts today than yesterday," said an announcer. "Police forces are dismantling roadblocks at a quicker pace."

Consumer prices up, food down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices increased five-tenths of 1 per cent in September and helped push the purchasing power of workers' paychecks down sixth-tenths of 1 per cent, the government said today.

Despite the over-all increase in consumer prices, food prices at supermarkets declined for the first time since early this year, the Labor Department reported. The food prices dropped two-tenths of 1 per cent since August, with sharp reductions in prices for beef, fresh fruits and vegetables, the department said.

It said the decline in the buying power of workers' earnings resulted both from the rise in consumer prices and from a decline of six-tenths of 1 per cent in average weekly working hours.

But it said purchasing power still is one per cent greater than last year, the result of federal income tax cuts in May ordered by Congress.

The September figures mean consumer prices are increasing at an annual rate of 6 per cent, which is below the 8 per cent annual inflation rate forecast by the government. For the first nine months of 1975 consumer prices have increased 5.1 per cent, and for the 12-month period ending in September they increased 7.8 per cent.

The Labor Department said its consumer price index in September stood at 163.6 of the 1967 average of 100, meaning it cost $163.60 last month to buy the same goods that cost $100 in 1967.

The September price report showed that the rate of inflation, while still high, is continuing to decline from the double-digit levels of a year ago.

Consumer prices had increased two-tenths of 1 per cent in August, which was considered unusually low.

The Labor Department said prices of goods other than foods increased three-tenths of 1 per cent in September, in part because prices of 1975 model cars did not decline as much as new car prices usually do at the close of the model year.

Prices of 1976 models will be reflected in the October price index, the department said.

Prices of fuel oil and coal jumped 1.3 per cent in September, reflecting a steady upward increase of utilities costs.

Lilbourn biker seriously hurt

A Lilbourn bicyclist was seriously injured and a Dexter youth received minor injuries in separate accidents on area roads Tuesday and early today, the highway patrol announced today.

Talmadge D. Fields, 27, of Lilbourn was seriously injured in a bicycle-automobile accident at 4:15 p.m. Tuesday on Route D in Lilbourn.

The accident occurred when Fields turned his bicycle into the path of a westbound car driven by Eddie Ben Sanders, 35, of Columbus, Wis.

Fields was taken to Pemiscot County Medical Center in Hayti, then transferred to Veterans Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

At 12:45 a.m. today, Terry L Moore, 18, of Dexter received minor injuries in a single-vehicle accident on Route AF south of Dexter city limits.

The patrol said Moore lost control of a northbound car, which ran off the road on a curve and struck a house. The patrol said the house was not damaged.

Moore was taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital.

Rezoning plan rejected, another is accepted

The Sikeston Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday rejected a rezoning proposal for a tract of land west of South Kingshighway and recommended rezoning of an area west of First Street and vacating of two alleys.

Dyer-Bussey Realtors, Inc. requested the rezoning from multiple family to commercial of the west half of the block bounded by South Kingshighway, West Kathleen Avenue, South New Madrid Street and West Gladys Street.

The request was rejected by the commission after several residents appeared at the meeting to speak against the proposals.

The residents said they were afraid of what the change would do to the neighborhood. They said they do not want stores, offices or mobile homes in the area.

The commission recommended the rezoning from single-family to commercial of the east portion of the lots between North Main Street and First Street from Smith Street to Wakefield Street. The west half of the lots is already zoned commercial.

A request to rezone the east side of First Street from single-family to commercial was tabled.

The commission recommended vacating of an unused alley running south from West Kathleen Avenue between Scott and Stoddard streets. The alley dead ends into another alley running east and west.

The commission also recommended vacating the east half of an alley running east and west between Tanner and Lake streets from North Main Street to Taylor Street.

The commission then recommended the alley swing south midway in the block to Lake Street.

The move was made to free the east half of the block for an eight-store shopping center.

Barkett sells Big Star store

Barkett's Big Star Market in the Midtowner Village Shopping Center has been sold to Harold and Virginia Bruce of Caruthersville, former owner Phil Barkett announced today.

Barkett said the sale was made on Sunday.

The Bruces operate Big Star stores in Caruthersville, Dexter and Jackson, Tenn.

Barkett said the new owners will continue to operate the store with the same crew. He said he expects the store name will be changed.

He said he will continue to operate the E-Z Mart store on Davis Boulevard as a superette and will open an office on East Malone Avenue in the building formerly occupied by Radio Shack. Barkett said he is considering a number of business ventures.

Barkett operated the Big Star store for 18 years. Prior to opening the Sikeston store, he was in the grocery business in Charleston and Cairo, Ill.

CHARLESTON — Bill Woods, director of the Mississippi County Ambulance Service since January, submitted his resignation Monday afternoon at a special meeting of the County Court.

After accepting the resignation, which was effective today, the court appointed Carl Cates as temporary director. Woods reportedly resigned to accept another position.

Representatives of Levee District No. 3 and Big Lake Drainage District met with the court to discuss installation of a pumping station at Drinkwater Sewer.

Raymert Miller, a representative of McMullin Construct Co. of Sikeston, contractors for the Mississippi County Airport, informed the court that the airport is ready for final inspection with the exception of installation of the directional beacon, which Miller said will not affect approval from the Federal Aviation Administration.

Jackie Robinson, 19, was charged with interfering with a police officer. All three were released after posting $50 bonds and are scheduled to appear in City Court on Oct. 27.

Ritchey said Patterson and Cleaves got into an argument about 3:45 p.m., and Cleaves allegedly struck Patterson with a three-foot stick. Patterson left the area and returned a short time later with a .410 gauge shotgun, which he fired once into the air. Additional threats were made between the two men, and Mrs. Robison reportedly became involved as officers were attempting to arrest the two men.

Authorities investigate cattle mutilations

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Law enforcement authorities throughout Missouri are investigating a series of cattle mutilation cases in which animals have been found missing eyes, ears and sexual organs.

"It's one of those things that don't make any sense at all," said Lawrence County Sheriff Marvin Quade, who has investigated three such cases since Saturday in the southwest Missouri county. Quade said that in each case, the cow's tongue, rectum and uterus had been cut out.

"We're trying to compile what we can get, but so far, I've got to say we're stumped. It's a real mystery," Quade said.

Similar reports have been received from county sheriffs in other parts of the state.

The Shelby County sheriff's office in northeast Missouri reported that it was investigating the mutilation of an Angus bull found Monday with its sexual organs removed.

A deputy sheriff in Nodaway said four cases of cattle mutilations have been reported in that northwestern part of the state in the last month.

"Usually the rear portion of the cow has been removed with a sharp knife," the deputy said.

The cases have prompted the Missouri Cattlemen's Association to extend its $2,000 reward program for information on cattle rustlers to cover the mutilation cases.

"We don't have any way of knowing who or what is behind this," said Jim Spencer, executive secretary of the 2,400 member association. "In some cases they draw blood from animals."

Capt. C. C. Maddox, head of the Missouri Highway Patrol's criminal investigation division, said the patrol was assistng in some of the cases.

"How widespread this is is the first thing that I'm trying to establish," Maddox said. He suggested that county sheriffs with information on such cases should forward it to the Highway Patrol and the state veterinarian's office in the Department of Agriculture.

"I feel like it's a religious cult myself," said Pike County Sheriff Dave Jenkins. A cow was found dead in that Mississippi River county Oct. 4, missing its tongue, right eye, right ear, tail and sexual organs.

A rash of cattle mutilations were reported recently in 11 western states, with most of them occurring in Colorado. The Colorado Bureau of Investigation looked into a number of theories as to what might have caused the mutilations, ranging from religious cults to farmers wanting to collect insurance on animals already dead from disease, but no solutions were reached.

HEARING DEAF PLEAS

The 13 million Americans who are deaf are the latest discriminated-against minority to be heard from, and they intend to shout until the insurance industry, for one, opens its ears.

"Insurance protection is an essential element of American life, yet deaf citizens are often denied coverage," says Albert Pimentel, director of public service programs at Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C. "Or when insurance is available, the deaf man or woman must be content to pay higher premiums, accept unwarranted restrictions or both."

To change this situation, an educational program aimed at the insurance industry has been launched by the National Association of the Deaf and Gallaudet,the nation's only accredited liberal arts college for the deaf.

The campaign will underscore two points that the deaf community has not, so far, succeeded in getting across: (1) the deaf population's safety record compares favorably with that of the hearing population; (2) the deaf represent an untapped and potentially high-profit market for insurance.

As a group, says Pimentel, deaf citizens have an impressive driving record. During a 10-year period in Pennsylvania, for example, not one of that state's 3,000 deaf drivers had a personal injury accident. According to a spokesman for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, if a deaf person is placed in a position where his handicap will not be a factor, he is actually less likely to have an industrial accident than a worker with hearing.

Despite the data, however, deaf individuals pay higher rates for automobile insurance and life insurance companies deny deaf men and women double indemnity protection in event of accidental death. Employes reject qualified deaf applicants out of fear that they will have to pay higher workmen's compensation premiums.

It is this kind of discrimination that has raised the ire of the deaf community.

States Pimentel: "We want the right to protect our families, drive with peace of mind and get jobs that we are qualified for. We no longer want to face hurdles at every turn.

For one thing, Congressman Grassley has introduced a bill to rescind the self-imposed salary raises in Congress. He also has started the crusade against proliferation of the federal bureaucracy.

He pointed out the other day that in 1957 then-President Eisenhower put a freeze on the creation of new federal agencies. He also ordered a survey to determine how many existing agencies could be disbanded without disrupting essential services.

During the ensuing 18 years 200 new federal agencies have been created while only 21 old ones have been closed down.

And then there was the appropriation for French lessons in the Federal Communications Commission.

Congressman Grassley discovered that the FCC has been sending 29 of its employes to school during their regular working hours to learn to speak French. The cost of the lessons is $3,500. The lessons are useful, it was explained, in that when these workers go abroad to international conferences they will be able to converse with other delegates.

A check of the planning schedule of the FCC reveals that in the next few years only one of the French students will be going abroad -- to a 1977 conference in Geneva.

We trust he -- or she -- will have learned by then to pariey vous enough to get around in Switzerland, no that we taxpayers have anted-up $3,500 for the lessons.

THE GOVERNMENT RATHOLE

The average American's rising taxes (withholdings for federal and state and also local taxes) are beginning to confirm his darkest fears and deepest suspicions: Government--not big business, big oil or the supermarkets--is gobbling up his earnings faster than any cost in the private sector.

Squeezed by inflation and recession, taxpayers are desperately looking to Washington, in particular, for some truly permanent tax relief. But the long-term prospects--despite the tax cut--promise only deeper federal debt, added inflation and higher taxes.

So it is no wonder that more and more Americans are beginning to think Washington has gone berserk. Consider the following, as drawn from Donald Lambro's book, "The Federal Rathole":

--Annual federal budget requests are now over $358 billion and climbing, with the fiscal 1977 budget conservatively projected to hit $393 billion. The gross federal debt is estimated to go over $605 billion by the end of this coming fiscal year. Interest on the debt owed is now costing taxpayers over $30 billion a year and is estimated to rise to $36 billion annually by June 30, 1976.

--Between 1970 and 1974 the government totaled deficits of $68 billion, but Treasury Secretary William Simon predicts that in this year alone the government will borrow at least $80 billion to meet its mounting bills on programs passed by Congress.

--Under President Ford's fiscal 1976 budget, government spending will race upward to nearly $1 billion a day. Meanwhile, the average taxpayer must work for over four months each year just to pay his total federal, state and local taxes. And there is no end in sight.

Soon after President Ford proposed his record-breaking fiscal 1976 budget earlier this year, taxpayers were told something that most of them hadn't fully realized before: Taxes outstripped all other cost increases in their budgets.

A study prepared by Congress' Joint Economic Subcommittee on Consumer Economics found that while the cost of food, housing and transportation rose by double digits in 1974, taxes on personal income and for Social Security shot up twice as fast.

Social Security taxes for an intermediate income family, for example, increased 21.6 per cent last year--from $647 in 1973 to $787 in 1974. Income taxes rose even more--by 26.5 per cent. In fact, the middle-income family saw all its federal, state and local taxes rise by more than 25 per cent, going from $1,607 in 1973 to $2,033 in 1974.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D.-Minn.)), who released the study and religiously votes for all expanded domestic spending programs, confessed he was "amazed" by the figures.

"Because of our graduated tax rate system taxes are rising faster than any other consumer expenditures," Humphrey said.

Frustrated yet resigned to the only two events in life one can still depend on, death and taxes, so far Americans benignly accept the increasing amounts being removed from their weekly earnings. They see the cost of government racing uncontrollably upward each year and prepare for the worst: they will foot the bill.

But who knows , maybe 1976 will be the year of the taxpayers' revolt--and candidates for public office may be in for a surprise at election time.

XXX

SOCKING IT TO EMPLOYERS

Employers, already squeezed by a steady increase in Social Security payments, now are being put in a vice on unemployment compensation.

The amount employers must pay to finance the Missouri unemployment trust fund is scheduled to go up sharply on Jan. 1 in order to pay the increased benefits for unemployed voted by the Legislature during the last session.

But even before the increase takes effect it is reported that emergency legislation will be introduced early in next year's session to raise the employers' unemployment compensation tax again. The reason this time is that the state fund is expected to be depleted by next March due to continuing high levels of unemployment.

Why should the employers have to pay all of these added costs?

It never was fair to require employers to carry the whole cost of this program in the state. Now that its costs are going out of sight it is doubly unfair.

Employes should pay their half of the cost of the program, rather than foist the whole load on employers.

When will state legislators and members of Congress recognize that there is a limit to what employers can contribute to social welfare programs?

The way things are going representatives in Jefferson City and Washington are treating employers as though they were a branch of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

When Social Security was begun during New Deal days employers were nominated to carry half the load. It would be a minimal cost, they were told. But, of course, it has become a dead weight around employers' necks, going up nearly every year. The current rate is 5.85 per cent.

Then came unemployment compensation but this time the employers were made to bear the whole cost. Once again, it was supposed to be a modest program. But now it has reached 4.1 per cent on the first $4,500 of an employe's wage, up from 3.6 per cent on the first $4,200 of an employe's earnings. Note how the state has adopted the same tactic as the federal government in expanding both the tax base and the tax rate?

The time has come to reexamine this whole concept of socking it to employers in order to gratify the spending schemes of representatives in government.

A NATIONAL INSECT?

Bert Brower thinks it's time to name a national insect.

Brower, associate editor of "The World of Agricultural Aviation," submits, "There is no better time than our bicentennial year to recognize the creatures which have so influenced our nation while at the same time received so little recognition. That is why there should be a national insect.

"Quite unlike the eagle and the buffalo, however, these creatures have demonstrated an uncanny ability to survive throughout or 200 year history.

"The choice will be difficult. How does one select and recognize one from the many species that are available to share our food, about 25 per cent of our agricultural crop?"

It's an idea that ought to set ears buzzing.

Aimed at EPA

Brower's sting is aimed at the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), which has banned the use of several pesticides used by agricultural aviators, and at the regulations placed on farmers and applicators by government agencies.

"The EPA has clearly demonstrated the expertise in preserving insects," he says as he nominates the agency as a natural to make the selection of the national insect.

"They have already done a great deal to protect the fire ant, the mosquito, the housefly and the corn root worm. In fact," he says. "The Department of Interior could take some pages out of EPA's book.

"For example, to prevent forest fires they could require that anyone who carries matches must be trained and certified competent, just as the EPA is doing to those who apply pesticides. Manufacturers of matches could be required to register their product and specific instructions for their use printed on each container. That undoubtedly would lower the incidence of forest fires."

Difficult task

Selection of our national insect would be difficult, Brower admits , but feels that candidates could be brought to Washington, D.C.

"Those partisans from the South could bring the fire ant to the front lawn of the Capitol. Thus, members of Congress who have, in the past, involved themselves in the preservation of the fire ant, could take off their shoes and dance in their midst," he says.

"Partisans from the Northwest could bring the tussock moth to eat up a few trees on the White house lawn or on the Mall. The EPA could be the final judge of which would have the most impact should they be selected.

"The potential of broadening the base for the celebration of our national insect is almost limitless.

"We could designate a week for a tribute to its achievements. If the mosquito were selected, we could have National Malari Week. If the housefly were selected, we could have Dysentery Day."

And who would administer the program?

"Well," Brower suggests, "our candidate is an economist who recently suggested total elimination of pesticides and agricultural chemicals. He stated that all that was necessary was to take the land out of the soil bank and double the acreage farmed.

"If no pesticides are used, insects, disease and varmints would only consume half the crop, leaving the other half for us. The committee, however, would have difficulty with this suggestion in absence of a mechanism to communicate to the pests when they have eaten their half."

CAN'T TAKE THIS SERIOUSLY

There are many people in Monroe County and elsewhere in the nation who refuse to seriously consider the continuing talk about there being a shortage of land on which to produce food.

Millions of acres that are now unproductive can be used for the purpose, most of them hilly lands.

For centuries the people of England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, Germany, France and the other European countries have been terracing, filling, fertilizing and cultivating their slopes and mountainsides, and producing oodles of food on them.

That land source has scarcely been tapped in either Monroe County or anywhere else in the nation. It takes more and harder work, of course, but that fact only leads to a conclusion that there is a m re of a shortage of elbow grease than of land.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

WASHINGTON—America's labor leaders always control their tempo. All of which irritates some of my colleagues who make occasional forays into this field expecting the unions' chiefs war councils to be pounding it out allegro, and then wander away when they find it's adagio.

Well, it doesn't work that way. Labor's vaudeville went out with the first Marx brother. Now it's all nitty-gritty arithmetic. That's the path to power analyses.

For example, so far-flung now are its national campaigns that the AFL-CIO has been running a heavy deficit, has raised its per-capita dues and plans to operate on a $22,152,000 annual budget in '76.

That's straight non-taxable cash. It will finance the head office across the street from the White House, many regional headquarters, the famed Al Barkan political COPE staff and legislative campaigns which will affect you on the street where you live as well as your personal doctors and lawyers.

That's what comes from having 14.2 million members, raising their per capita by three pennies each a month, so their own unions after Nov. 1 will send 13 cents per member per month to "16th Street" instead of a dime. I believe this provides the AFL-CIO with twice the amount of cash income of any national labor center in the free world. And I might well be underestimating.

From these funds come the financing of some of the most effective national research and lobbying on the Hill. If not the most effective. What is labor lobbying for these days? There's the drive for a statutory 35-hour week instead of the incumbent 40 hours. There always are 35-hour week rituals. But this year, what with labor's charge of unbearable unemployment, the drive will intensify. Sweeping '76 presidential and congressional victories for labor's candidates--meaning the full Democratic ticket--would bring the 35-hour week off the back burner as a share-the-work measure. And at 40 hours' pay.

Further, this would be linked with double time for overtime (after 35 hours) instead of the current time and a half.

What this would do to the nation's cost and price system is another matter, but that won't un-target the AFL-CIO.

This is all part of the new "econometrics" and takes more calculus than political analysis. But it's far more significant than what some Dick Diver does in some marginal district affected by new demographic crosswinds.

Further, the AFL-CIO now already is driving for a $3 an hour minimum wage though not until January will the minimum for most workers rise to $2.30. Just figure what this new minimum wage drive (almost always successful) will mean on a 40-hour week in completely unskilled labor fields.

And there is the lobbying push for a national health service created in the British image. If successful this would add another 3 per cent of wage deduction to that already subtracted from each employe--and each employer.

Already there are some labor-management contracts which call for the entire tax cost to be paid by industry. The nationalized medicine campaign has stirred doctors, dentists and other medical personnel into paroxysms of oratorical anger. And physicians into unionism. First, the doctors are worried by what has happened in England.

There my good friend Barbara Castle, the Queen's social service minister (who did better as minister of labor), has dumped the private physicians out of the state hospitals. There, too, the state decides how much the health service doctors will earn--by straight fiat and no bargaining.

Many American doctors are disturbed by the thought of facing a federal bureaucracy which will decide charges for everything from a tooth pulling to soothing a pulled tendon.

And now there is uneasiness among the nation's lawyers. Swiftly developing is what I call "judicare." This isn't an ethnic charity. This is prepaid group legal services--with the prepaying done by the boss.

Already the U.S. Labor Department has been glancing at the success of some unions in getting "free" legal services into some union contracts. It's spreading. It's legal. Specialists in judicare are springing up everywhere--among the Laborers' International locals, in New York City and state, and across to California.

"Prepaid legal services," says the AFL-CIO officially, "hold much promise of providing a needed service for union members. Therefore, the AFL-CIO recommends prepaid legal service plans should be incorporated into the collective bargaining programs of all affiliated national unions."

So this is beginning to roll just as did industry-borne welfare and medical programs in the '50s. Labor always seeks new angles, new fringes. And the newest is prepaid legal services.

And it's fairly predictable that just as the uncapped Cost of Living Allowance (COLA) suddenly became the thing, escalating into the billions each year, as did health coverage granting everything from free castration to free psychiatry, so soon will free legal services provide millions of union members with free lawyers to sue for everything from marital to "industrial" malpractice.

So look closely. You'll find that labor is more rock them and roll them than Kabuki.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Maltreatment of TV Animals
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Those appealing animals, which star in movies and TV commercials, are often maltreated. Some have been brutally killed.

These are the findings of the Humane Society of the United States whose wildlife expert, Sue Pressman, posed as a film producer to gather the grim details. Performers and crewmen, upset by the animal abuse, also provided information.

The Purina cats, which appear so contented in the TV commercials, apparently are miserable in real life. "Cage after cage of cats, kept for use in the Purina TV commercials," were packed with "30 to 40" animals, the unpublished study charges. "It was apparent that the cages hadn't been cleaned for several days."

A month after inspecting the cages, the undercover Sue Pressman returned to see what had happened to the cats. She was told, according to the Humane Society, that many "had died from some kind of disease. She ... surmised that the owner of the training facility" had saved money by getting the cats from animal shelters and avoiding full inoculations.

The society also discovered that "the fox used in the Audi Fox auto commercials (had) a diet card calling for nothing but two chicken necks a day, an extremely meager diet."

Also, "the bear that had starred in the Beverly Hillbillies TV series (was) living in a cramped cage, with no evidence of reward for the thousands of dollars it must have earned for its owner."

Worse, the report alleges that an impatient trainer "killed a well'known television lion by hitting it over the head with a two-by-four." Another anjmal handler allegedly "put out a trained cougar's eye." And part of a herd of horses narrowly escaped being blown up for a Western intent on showing action.

In her disguise as a producer, Mrs. Pressman told one trainer she needed a grizzly bear for her film. He suggested "that he could spray paint on a brown bear to make it look like a grizzly."

She found temperatures in California animal ghettos often reached "as high as 110 degrees." A trainer said he planned to deprive a bear of food for 34 days to cow it into performing, the report charges.

In sum, the Humane Society found Hollywood guilty of "inhumane training methods, including the withholding of food and the use of force, a total lack of preventive veterinary medical care (and) diets that fail to meet ... nutritional requirements."

The animal quarters were also "filthy, unsanitary (and) too small for necessary exercise." In what seems an understatement, Mrs. Pressman concluded: "Things are much worse than I anticipated."

Footnote: A Purina spokesman denied that its TV cats have been mistreated. He said the company had issued strict orders calling for humane handling of all Purina cats. Audi told us it is deeply concerned about the Humane Society's charges and is investigating. Producers of the Beverly Hillbillies noted that the series was filmed years ago and that they are no longer responsible for the bear. We also spoke to trainers who insisted that they treat their animals well.

DIRTIEST BUSINESS: We recently described a whole arsenal of eavesdropping devices, which the government uses to spy on private citizens.

We neglected to mention that the government has set the style for the commercial world as well. As one observeer put it, modern science has made snooping "the fastest growing but dirtiest business in the world."

Michigan Blue Cross and Blue Shield, for example, uses elaborate equipment to monitor telephone calls from the public. Unknown to the callers, supervisors at Blue Cross listen in on the telephone conversations between its service representatives and private citizens.

Other Michigan companies, such as Montgomery Ward, Sears and even Michigan Bell itself, eavesdrop on telephone callers.

In Georgia, firms using telephone monitoring equipment at least are required to register with the state. The public is alerted by an asterisk, which is placed next to the firm's name in the phone book.

Among the companies marked with an asterisk are Greyhound Bus, Georgia Power, Pan American Airways and Delta Air Lines.

Informed sources tell us there is massive use of monitoring devices by private companies. These not only are used to overhear telephone conversations; businessmen also place tens of thousands of bugs in competitor's showrooms, insurance offices, lawyers' offices, hotel rooms and elsewhere.

Legal experts believe this electronic surveillance may be a violation of the individual's constitutional right to privacy. This is the view of Dale Kildee, a Michigan state senator, who conducted his own investigation of electronic monitoring.

He warned: "Big Brother doesn't just jump in with a big splash. Big Brother creeps in and then he's there." Big Brother, of course, as the ever-present, all-seeing, all-knowing eavesdropper in George Orwell's concept of 1984.

In more ways than one, 1984 is getting closer.

Footnote: The companies mentioned in this report claim they employ telephone monitoring to improve their service. A spokesman for Michigan Blue Cross, for example, confirmed that the company has been monitoring calls for 10 or 15 years. The service representatives are aware of the monitoring but the public is not, he said. The eavesdropping is used "for quality control purposes only," he emphasized.

And then there was the appropriation for French lessons in the Federal Communications Commission.

Congressman Grassley discovered that the FCC has been sending 29 of its employes to school during their regular working hours to learn to speak French. The cost of the lessons is $3,500. The lessons are useful, it was explained, in that when these workers go abroad to international conferences they will be able to converse with other delegates.

A check of the planning schedule of the FCC reveals that in the next few years only one of the French students will be going abroad -- to a 1977 conference in Geneva.

We trust he -- or she -- will have learned by then to parley vous enough to get around in Switzerland, no that we taxpayers have anted-up $3,500 for the lessons.

Sic 'em, Chuck Grassley.

"We have the situation pretty well in hand!"

THE GOVERNMENT RATHOLE

The average American's rising taxes (withholdings for federal and state and also local taxes) are beginning to confirm his darkest fears and deepest suspicions: Government--not big business, big oil or the supermarkets--is gobbling up his earnings faster than any cost in the private sector.

Squeezed by inflation and recession, taxpayers are desperately looking to Washington, in particular, for some truly permanent tax relief. But the long-term prospects--despite the tax cut--promise only deeper federal debt, added inflation and higher taxes.

So it is no wonder that more and more Americans are beginning to think Washington has gone berserk. Consider the following, as drawn from Donald Lambro's book, "The Federal Rathole":

--Annual federal budget requests are now over $358 billion and climbing, with the fiscal 1977 budget conservatively projected to hit $393 billion. The gross federal debt is estimated to go over $605 billion by the end of this coming fiscal year. Interest on the debt owed is now costing taxpayers over $30 billion a year and is estimated to rise to $36 billion annually by June 30, 1976.

--Between 1970 and 1974 the government totaled deficits of $68 billion, but Treasury Secretary William Simon predicts that in this year alone the government will borrow at least $80 billion to meet its mounting bills on programs passed by Congress.

--Under President Ford's fiscal 1976 budget, government spending will race upward to nearly $1 billion a day. Meanwhile, the average taxpayer must work for over four months each year just to pay his total federal, state and local taxes. And there is no end in sight.

Soon after President Ford proposed his record-breaking fiscal 1976 budget earlier this year, taxpayers were told something that most of them hadn't fully realized before: Taxes outstripped all other cost increases in their budgets.

A study prepared by Congress' Joint Economic Subcommittee on Consumer Economics found that while the cost of food, housing and transportation rose by double digits in 1974, taxes on personal income and for Social Security shot up twice as fast.

Social Security taxes for an intermediate income family, for example, increased 21.6 per cent last year--from $647 in 1973 to $787 in 1974. Income taxes rose even more--by 26.5 per cent. In fact, the middle-income family saw all its federal, state and local taxes rise by more than 25 per cent, going from $1,607 in 1973 to $2,033 in 1974.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D.-Minn.)), who released the study and religiously votes for all expanded domestic spending programs, confessed he was "amazed" by the figures.

"Because of our graduated tax rate system taxes are rising faster than any other consumer expenditures," Humphrey said.

Frustrated yet resigned to the only two events in life one can still depend on, death and taxes, so far Americans benignly accept the increasing amounts being removed from their weekly earnings. They see the cost of government racing uncontrollably upward each year and prepare for the worst: they will foot the bill.

But who knows , maybe 1976 will be the year of the taxpayers' revolt--and candidates for public office may be in for a surprise at election time.

XXX

SOCKING IT TO EMPLOYERS

Employers, already squeezed by a steady increase in Social Security payments, now are being put in a vice on unemployment compensation.

The amount employers must pay to finance the Missouri unemployment trust fund is scheduled to go up sharply on Jan. 1 in order to pay the increased benefits for unemployed voted by the Legislature during the last session.

But even before the increase takes effect it is reported that emergency legislation will be introduced early in next year's session to raise the employers' unemployment compensation tax again. The reason this time is that the state fund is expected to be depleted by next March due to continuing high levels of unemployment.

Why should the employers have to pay all of these added costs?

It never was fair to require employers to carry the whole cost of this program in the state. Now that its costs are going out of sight it is doubly unfair.

Employes should pay their half of the cost of the program, rather than foist the whole load on employers.

When will state legislators and members of Congress recognize that there is a limit to what employers can contribute to social welfare programs?

The way things are going representatives in Jefferson City and Washington are treating employers as though they were a branch of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

When Social Security was begun during New Deal days employers were nominated to carry half the load. It would be a minimal cost, they were told. But, of course, it has become a dead weight around employers' necks, going up nearly every year. The current rate is 5.85 per cent.

Then came unemployment compensation but this time the employers were made to bear the whole cost. Once again, it was supposed to be a modest program. But now it has reached 4.1 per cent on the first $4,500 of an employe's wage, up from 3.6 per cent on the first $4,200 of an employe's earnings. Note how the state has adopted the same tactic as the federal government in expanding both the tax base and the tax rate?

The time has come to reexamine this whole concept of socking it to employers in order to gratify the spending schemes of representatives in government.

A NATIONAL INSECT?

Bert Brower thinks it's time to name a national insect.

Brower, associate editor of "The World of Agricultural Aviation," submits, "There is no better time than our bicentennial year to recognize the creatures which have so influenced our nation while at the same time received so little recognition. That is why there should be a national insect.

"Quite unlike the eagle and the buffalo, however, these creatures have demonstrated an uncanny ability to survive throughout or 200 year history.

"The choice will be difficult. How does one select and recognize one from the many species that are available to share our food, about 25 per cent of our agricultural crop?"

It's an idea that ought to set ears buzzing.

Aimed at EPA

Brower's sting is aimed at the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), which has banned the use of several pesticides used by agricultural aviators, and at the regulations placed on farmers and applicators by government agencies.

"The EPA has clearly demonstrated the expertise in preserving insects," he says as he nominates the agency as a natural to make the selection of the national insect.

"They have already done a great deal to protect the fire ant, the mosquito, the housefly and the corn root worm. In fact," he says. "The Department of Interior could take some pages out of EPA's book.

"For example, to prevent forest fires they could require that anyone who carries matches must be trained and certified competent, just as the EPA is doing to those who apply pesticides. Manufacturers of matches could be required to register their product and specific instructions for their use printed on each container. That undoubtedly would lower the incidence of forest fires."

Difficult task

Selection of our national insect would be difficult, Brower admits , but feels that candidates could be brought to Washington, D.C.

"Those partisans from the South could bring the fire ant to the front lawn of the Capitol. Thus, members of Congress who have, in the past, involved themselves in the preservation of the fire ant, could take off their shoes and dance in their midst," he says.

"Partisans from the Northwest could bring the tussock moth to eat up a few trees on the White house lawn or on the Mall. The EPA could be the final judge of which would have the most impact should they be selected.

"The potential of broadening the base for the celebration of our national insect is almost limitless.

"We could designate a week for a tribute to its achievements. If the mosquito were selected, we could have National Malari Week. If the housefly were selected, we could have Dysentery Day."

And who would administer the program?

"Well," Brower suggests, "our candidate is an economist who recently suggested total elimination of pesticides and agricultural chemicals. He stated that all that was necessary was to take the land out of the soil bank and double the acreage farmed.

"If no pesticides are used, insects, disease and varmints would only consume half the crop, leaving the other half for us. The committee, however, would have difficulty with this suggestion in absence of a mechanism to communicate to the pests when they have eaten their half."

CAN'T TAKE THIS SERIOUSLY

There are many people in Monroe County and elsewhere in the nation who refuse to seriously consider the continuing talk about there being a shortage of land on which to produce food.

Millions of acres that are now unproductive can be used for the purpose, most of them hilly lands.

For centuries the people of England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, Germany, France and the other European countries have been terracing, filling, fertilizing and cultivating their slopes and mountainsides, and producing oodles of food on them.

That land source has scarcely been tapped in either Monroe County or anywhere else in the nation. It takes more and harder work, of course, but that fact only leads to a conclusion that there is a m re of a shortage of elbow grease than of land.

THE TRUSTED REPORTER

The ideal reporteris one who can be trusted. Sommetimes he has to violate the law in order to maintain that trust. There's the case of William T. Farr, reporter for the Los Angeles Examiner. He was 39 years old, obtained facts for a story connected with the Mason murder trial, and printed it. He was brought into court to tell where he got the story. There was never any question as to it reliability but the court wanted to know who told him. He didn't tell and was kept in jail for 46 days before coming to trial where the judge gave him the maximum sentence for his crime, five days and a $500 fine. There was no credit given him for his days in jial before the sentence. We'll bet Mr. Farr will be able to get news in the future no other reporter can get. Everybody around Los Angeles knows he can be trusted not to tell on them.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

WASHINGTON—America's labor leaders always control their tempo. All of which irritates some of my colleagues who make occasional forays into this field expecting the unions' chiefs war councils to be pounding it out allegro, and then wander away when they find it's adagio.

Well, it doesn't work that way. Labor's vaudeville went out with the first Marx brother. Now it's all nitty-gritty arithmetic. That's the path to power analyses.

For example, so far-flung now are its national campaigns that the AFL-CIO has been running a heavy deficit, has raised its per-capita dues and plans to operate on a $22,152,000 annual budget in '76.

That's straight non-taxable cash. It will finance the head office across the street from the White House, many regional headquarters, the famed Al Barkan political COPE staff and legislative campaigns which will affect you on the street where you live as well as your personal doctors and lawyers.

That's what comes from having 14.2 million members, raising their per capita by three pennies each a month, so their own unions after Nov. 1 will send 13 cents per member per month to "16th Street" instead of a dime. I believe this provides the AFL-CIO with twice the amount of cash income of any national labor center in the free world. And I might well be underestimating.

From these funds come the financing of some of the most effective national research and lobbying on the Hill. If not the most effective. What is labor lobbying for these days? There's the drive for a statutory 35-hour week instead of the incumbent 40 hours. There always are 35-hour week rituals. But this year, what with labor's charge of unbearable unemployment, the drive will intensify. Sweeping '76 presidential and congressional victories for labor's candidates--meaning the full Democratic ticket--would bring the 35-hour week off the back burner as a share-the-work measure. And at 40 hours' pay.

Further, this would be linked with double time for overtime (after 35 hours) instead of the current time and a half.

What this would do to the nation's cost and price system is another matter, but that won't un-target the AFL-CIO.

This is all part of the new "econometrics" and takes more calculus than political analysis. But it's far more significant than what some Dick Diver does in some marginal district affected by new demographic crosswinds.

Further, the AFL-CIO now already is driving for a $3 an hour minimum wage though not until January will the minimum for most workers rise to $2.30. Just figure what this new minimum wage drive (almost always successful) will mean on a 40-hour week in completely unskilled labor fields.

And there is the lobbying push for a national health service created in the British image. If successful this would add another 3 per cent of wage deduction to that already subtracted from each employe--and each employer.

Already there are some labor-management contracts which call for the entire tax cost to be paid by industry. The nationalized medicine campaign has stirred doctors, dentists and other medical personnel into paroxysms of oratorical anger. And physicians into unionism. First, the doctors are worried by what has happened in England.

There my good friend Barbara Castle, the Queen's social service minister (who did better as minister of labor), has dumped the private physicians out of the state hospitals. There, too, the state decides how much the health service doctors will earn--by straight fiat and no bargaining.

Many American doctors are disturbed by the thought of facing a federal bureaucracy which will decide charges for everything from a tooth pulling to soothing a pulled tendon.

And now there is uneasiness among the nation's lawyers. Swiftly developing is what I call "judicare." This isn't an ethnic charity. This is prepaid group legal services--with the prepaying done by the boss.

Already the U.S. Labor Department has been glancing at the success of some unions in getting "free" legal services into some union contracts. It's spreading. It's legal. Specialists in judicare are springing up everywhere--among the Laborers' International locals, in New York City and state, and across to California.

"Prepaid legal services," says the AFL-CIO officially, "hold much promise of providing a needed service for union members. Therefore, the AFL-CIO recommends prepaid legal service plans should be incorporated into the collective bargaining programs of all affiliated national unions."

So this is beginning to roll just as did industry-borne welfare and medical programs in the '50s. Labor always seeks new angles, new fringes. And the newest is prepaid legal services.

And it's fairly predictable that just as the uncapped Cost of Living Allowance (COLA) suddenly became the thing, escalating into the billions each year, as did health coverage granting everything from free castration to free psychiatry, so soon will free legal services provide millions of union members with free lawyers to sue for everything from marital to "industrial" malpractice.

So look closely. You'll find that labor is more rock them and roll them than Kabuki.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:

Maltreatment of TV Animals

with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Those appealing animals, which star in movies and TV commercials, are often maltreated. Some have been brutally killed.

These are the findings of the Humane Society of the United States whose wildlife expert, Sue Pressman, posed as a film producer to gather the grim details. Performers and crewmen, upset by the animal abuse, also provided information.

The Purina cats, which appear so contented in the TV commercials, apparently are miserable in real life. "Cage after cage of cats, kept for use in the Purina TV commercials," were packed with "30 to 40" animals, the unpublished study charges. "It was apparent that the cages hadn't been cleaned for several days."

A month after inspecting the cages, the undercover Sue Pressman returned to see what had happened to the cats. She was told, according to the Humane Society, that many "had died from some kind of disease. She ... surmised that the owner of the training facility" had saved money by getting the cats from animal shelters and avoiding full inoculations.

The society also discovered that "the fox used in the Audi Fox auto commercials (had) a diet card calling for nothing but two chicken necks a day, an extremely meager diet."

Also, "the bear that had starred in the Beverly Hillbillies TV series (was) living in a cramped cage, with no evidence of reward for the thousands of dollars it must have earned for its owner."

Worse, the report alleges that an impatient trainer "killed a well'known television lion by hitting it over the head with a two-by-four." Another anjmal handler allegedly "put out a trained cougar's eye." And part of a herd of horses narrowly escaped being blown up for a Western intent on showing action.

In her disguise as a producer, Mrs. Pressman told one trainer she needed a grizzly bear for her film. He suggested "that he could spray paint on a brown bear to make it look like a grizzly."

She found temperatures in California animal ghettos often reached "as high as 110 degrees." A trainer said he planned to deprive a bear of food for 34 days to cow it into performing, the report charges.

In sum, the Humane Society found Hollywood guilty of "inhumane training methods, including the withholding of food and the use of force, a total lack of preventive veterinary medical care (and) diets that fail to meet ... nutritional requirements."

The animal quarters were also "filthy, unsanitary (and) too small for necessary exercise." In what seems an understatement, Mrs. Pressman concluded: "Things are much worse than I anticipated."

Footnote: A Purina spokesman denied that its TV cats have been mistreated. He said the company had issued strict orders calling for humane handling of all Purina cats. Audi told us it is deeply concerned about the Humane Society's charges and is investigating. Producers of the Beverly Hillbillies noted that the series was filmed years ago and that they are no longer responsible for the bear. We also spoke to trainers who insisted that they treat their animals well.

DIRTIEST BUSINESS: We recently described a whole arsenal of eavesdropping devices, which the government uses to spy on private citizens.

We neglected to mention that the government has set the style for the commercial world as well. As one observeer put it, modern science has made snooping "the fastest growing but dirtiest business in the world."

Michigan Blue Cross and Blue Shield, for example, uses elaborate equipment to monitor telephone calls from the public. Unknown to the callers, supervisors at Blue Cross listen in on the telephone conversations between its service representatives and private citizens.

Other Michigan companies, such as Montgomery Ward, Sears and even Michigan Bell itself, eavesdrop on telephone callers.

In Georgia, firms using telephone monitoring equipment at least are required to register with the state. The public is alerted by an asterisk, which is placed next to the firm's name in the phone book.

Among the companies marked with an asterisk are Greyhound Bus, Georgia Power, Pan American Airways and Delta Air Lines.

Informed sources tell us there is massive use of monitoring devices by private companies. These not only are used to overhear telephone conversations; businessmen also place tens of thousands of bugs in competitor's showrooms, insurance offices, lawyers' offices, hotel rooms and elsewhere.

Legal experts believe this electronic surveillance may be a violation of the individual's constitutional right to privacy. This is the view of Dale Kildee, a Michigan state senator, who conducted his own investigation of electronic monitoring.

He warned: "Big Brother doesn't just jump in with a big splash. Big Brother creeps in and then he's there." Big Brother, of course, as the ever-present, all-seeing, all-knowing eavesdropper in George Orwell's concept of 1984.

In more ways than one, 1984 is getting closer.

Footnote: The companies mentioned in this report claim they employ telephone monitoring to improve their service. A spokesman for Michigan Blue Cross, for example, confirmed that the company has been monitoring calls for 10 or 15 years. The service representatives are aware of the monitoring but the public is not, he said. The eavesdropping is used "for quality control purposes only," he emphasized.

Hi—Previous day's high.
Lo—This morning's low.

Some materials not covered by Open Meetings

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Files, work papers and other documents which are being prepared for audit purposes by The state auditor's office are not covered under Missouri's Open Meetings law and shall not be open to the public, an opinion issued by Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth said Tuesday.

In response to an inquiry by Auditor George Lehr, the opinion said that investigatory files of the auditor's office fall within an exception provision of the "Sunshine Law."

That exception says, "Other meetings, records or votes as otherwise provided bylaw may be a closed meeting, closed record or closed vote."

The opinion noted that Missouri statutes governing the auditor's office provide that examiners must not "reveal the condition of any office examined ... or any information secured in the course of any examination ... to anyone except the state auditor."

Another portion of the statute says that all final audit reports shall be made a matter of public record.

"It is our view that the General Assembly took great care to provide for publicity of final audit reports,but that it was highly sensitive to the impropriety of disclosing preliminary information which may or may not find its way into final audit reports," the opinion said.

Lehr asked Danforth's office for the opinion after he ejected reporters for the Kansas City Star and Associated Press from a meeting of his auditors and members of the Public Service Commission.

During that session, Lehr and the commission were discussing a draft report of the long-awaited audit of the PSC. The report, which contained no surprises, was released about a week later.

Under the Open Meetings law, all constitutional and statutory public entities must meet in public when either formally or informaly discussing public business, making decisions or formulating public policy.

Move to oust Spain subsides

JEFFERSON CITY—A move to oust Democratic State Chairman James E. Spain has subsided, partially because no one is interested in taking the job, a check with party leaders here has disclosed.

Spain set off a furor among some of the 60 members of the state committee two weeks ago after allegedly making remarks about Senate leader William J. Cason, the leading Democratic contender for governor.

It appears Spain has weathered the storm, key party leaders said, although he may be asked to explain his statement about Cason more fully at an upcoming meeting of the state committee.

Spain told The Glove-Democrat Tuesday he sent letters to a number of committee members explaining that he did not mean to slur Cason's candidacy and if he was guilty of anything it was for "not being fast enough on my feet" to field trick questions.

Spain, in a question and answer period after a speech to students in Cape Girardeau two weeks ago, said Cason did not have the personal touch that may be required to get elected governor.

He said this was in answer to a question that assumed the Cason candidacy was not catching fire, as had been suggested in some quarters. Spain added that he thought State Auditor George W. Lehr would make a good candidate.

The incident caused Cason's campaign headquarters to send out a blistering press release denouncing Spain and falling just short of demanding his resignation as state party chief. Some committee members began talking about ouster procedings after the incident, but the move has apparently petered out.

"Let's face it, Jim may have made a mistake by putting his foot in his mouth, but being chairman is a time consuming and thankless job. People aren't exactly waiting in line for the job," a Democratic Party leader close to the situation said.

The party chairman is supposed to remain neutral during a primary race.

Meanwhile, state committee members have received a letter from St. Louis County Local 398 of the Firefighters Union criticizing Spain's remarks. The union has endorsed Cason for governor. The letter states that Spain has failed to be "fair and impartial," but does not demand his ouster.

Furniture store in Chaffee sold

Harmon began with a small radio-electronics shop, but expanded his operation to include 18,000 square feet of space.

For 12 years Ford was connected with Sears Roebuck Co. He served the past two and one-half years as commercial sales manager with the Cape Girardeau store.

Miss Alma Keller, who has been employed by the store a number of years, will remain as buyer and bookkeepeer.

Harmon, who is retiring, will remain in Chaffee where he also has other business interests.

The Fords and their two-year-old daughter will move here soon.

CONGRESS LIMITS PAY RAISE

Both houses of Congress recently voted to limit the federal employee pay raise to 5 per cent instead of 8.66 per cent as was recommended by the President's Office of Management and Budget. More than two million federal employees were affected.

I voted to limit the raise to 5 per cent because, among other reasons, the limitation saved the taxpayers 1.6 billion dollars -- money that was neither in the President's budget nor in the budget ceiling approved by Congress -- at a time when our country's economy needs some belt tightening.

The economic ramifications of adding $1.6 billion to the federal budget at this time are many. Foremost in the mind of the public is the fear of contributing to another round of runaway inflation.

Before paying out large amounts of money from the federal treasury, the government has to first acquire it. Normally it sells bonds to banks, savings and loan associations, corporations, individuals and other investors. The government's competition with other borrowers contributes to pushing interest rates up. Thus, other borrowers, such as families trying to get a mortgage to buy a home, are adversely affected.

Government Must Attract Qualified People

I firmly believe that quality government is directly related to the government's ability to attract qualified employees. Restricting this year's comparability pay raise to 5 per cent should not impair this ability. Increases in pay and benefits in the private sector have also reflected the difficult economic conditions of the last few years and should not attract employees away from government service.

The 8.66 per cent pay raise was based upon a study of wage increases of jobs in the private sector which are comparable to jobs in the federal government. That comparability study has recently been criticized by groups examining the procedure.

GAO Report

The Comptroller General of the General Accounting Office (the investigative arm of Congress), the Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, and the President's Council on Federal Compensation headed by Vice President Rockefeller have all concluded that comparability calculations suggest higher raises for federal employees than a more comprehensive study of other jobs would justify.

The President's Council on Federal Compensation will be reporting its findings and recommendations for corrective measures to the President and the Congress in the very near future. It is my hope that the President and the Congress will seriously consider these proposals and produce a comparability pay raise study that is above reproach.

Hi—Previous day's high.
Lo—This morning's low.

Some materials not covered by Open Meetings

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Files, work papers and other documents which are being prepared for audit purposes by The state auditor's office are not covered under Missouri's Open Meetings law and shall not be open to the public, an opinion issued by Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth said Tuesday.

In response to an inquiry by Auditor George Lehr, the opinion said that investigatory files of the auditor's office fall within an exception provision of the "Sunshine Law."

That exception says, "Other meetings, records or votes as otherwise provided bylaw may be a closed meeting, closed record or closed vote."

The opinion noted that Missouri statutes governing the auditor's office provide that examiners must not "reveal the condition of any office examined ... or any information secured in the course of any examination ... to anyone except the state auditor."

Another portion of the statute says that all final audit reports shall be made a matter of public record.

"It is our view that the General Assembly took great care to provide for publicity of final audit reports,but that it was highly sensitive to the impropriety of disclosing preliminary information which may or may not find its way into final audit reports," the opinion said.

Lehr asked Danforth's office for the opinion after he ejected reporters for the Kansas City Star and Associated Press from a meeting of his auditors and members of the Public Service Commission.

During that session, Lehr and the commission were discussing a draft report of the long-awaited audit of the PSC. The report, which contained no surprises, was released about a week later.

Under the Open Meetings law, all constitutional and statutory public entities must meet in public when either formally or informaly discussing public business, making decisions or formulating public policy.

Move to oust Spain subsides

JEFFERSON CITY—A move to oust Democratic State Chairman James E. Spain has subsided, partially because no one is interested in taking the job, a check with party leaders here has disclosed.

Spain set off a furor among some of the 60 members of the state committee two weeks ago after allegedly making remarks about Senate leader William J. Cason, the leading Democratic contender for governor.

It appears Spain has weathered the storm, key party leaders said, although he may be asked to explain his statement about Cason more fully at an upcoming meeting of the state committee.

Spain told The Glove-Democrat Tuesday he sent letters to a number of committee members explaining that he did not mean to slur Cason's candidacy and if he was guilty of anything it was for "not being fast enough on my feet" to field trick questions.

Spain, in a question and answer period after a speech to students in Cape Girardeau two weeks ago, said Cason did not have the personal touch that may be required to get elected governor.

He said this was in answer to a question that assumed the Cason candidacy was not catching fire, as had been suggested in some quarters. Spain added that he thought State Auditor George W. Lehr would make a good candidate.

The incident caused Cason's campaign headquarters to send out a blistering press release denouncing Spain and falling just short of demanding his resignation as state party chief. Some committee members began talking about ouster procedings after the incident, but the move has apparently petered out.

"Let's face it, Jim may have made a mistake by putting his foot in his mouth, but being chairman is a time consuming and thankless job. People aren't exactly waiting in line for the job," a Democratic Party leader close to the situation said.

The party chairman is supposed to remain neutral during a primary race.

Meanwhile, state committee members have received a letter from St. Louis County Local 398 of the Firefighters Union criticizing Spain's remarks. The union has endorsed Cason for governor. The letter states that Spain has failed to be "fair and impartial," but does not demand his ouster.

Furniture store in Chaffee sold

Harmon began with a small radio-electronics shop, but expanded his operation to include 18,000 square feet of space.

For 12 years Ford was connected with Sears Roebuck Co. He served the past two and one-half years as commercial sales manager with the Cape Girardeau store.

Miss Alma Keller, who has been employed by the store a number of years, will remain as buyer and bookkeepeer.

Harmon, who is retiring, will remain in Chaffee where he also has other business interests.

The Fords and their two-year-old daughter will move here soon.

CONGRESS LIMITS PAY RAISE

Both houses of Congress recently voted to limit the federal employee pay raise to 5 per cent instead of 8.66 per cent as was recommended by the President's Office of Management and Budget. More than two million federal employees were affected.

I voted to limit the raise to 5 per cent because, among other reasons, the limitation saved the taxpayers 1.6 billion dollars -- money that was neither in the President's budget nor in the budget ceiling approved by Congress -- at a time when our country's economy needs some belt tightening.

The economic ramifications of adding $1.6 billion to the federal budget at this time are many. Foremost in the mind of the public is the fear of contributing to another round of runaway inflation.

Before paying out large amounts of money from the federal treasury, the government has to first acquire it. Normally it sells bonds to banks, savings and loan associations, corporations, individuals and other investors. The government's competition with other borrowers contributes to pushing interest rates up. Thus, other borrowers, such as families trying to get a mortgage to buy a home, are adversely affected.

Government Must Attract Qualified People

I firmly believe that quality government is directly related to the government's ability to attract qualified employees. Restricting this year's comparability pay raise to 5 per cent should not impair this ability. Increases in pay and benefits in the private sector have also reflected the difficult economic conditions of the last few years and should not attract employees away from government service.

The 8.66 per cent pay raise was based upon a study of wage increases of jobs in the private sector which are comparable to jobs in the federal government. That comparability study has recently been criticized by groups examining the procedure.

GAO Report

The Comptroller General of the General Accounting Office (the investigative arm of Congress), the Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, and the President's Council on Federal Compensation headed by Vice President Rockefeller have all concluded that comparability calculations suggest higher raises for federal employees than a more comprehensive study of other jobs would justify.

The President's Council on Federal Compensation will be reporting its findings and recommendations for corrective measures to the President and the Congress in the very near future. It is my hope that the President and the Congress will seriously consider these proposals and produce a comparability pay raise study that is above reproach.

Layoff brings appreciation of what regular job can do

TRENTON, Mo. AP - Steve and Sarah Counts have a mortgage on the home they have just purchased, payments on a car and all the expenses that go with two children in theirgrowth years.

Steve was laid off from his factory job in a nearby town last April 28, and was recently called back. How a four-month layoff, forced by the economy, affects a family breadwinner. will vary from person to person. How it affected Steve Counts is examined here. Family names have been changed.

"There was some tension with Sarah," Steve said. "It was obvious it was there. I mean I'm I'm home all day and she goes to work. I was just lazy enough to enjoy it for a while, but it got old. I was getting a slight case of cabin fever," he recalled. "Some guys can go out to the bar and sit all day, but I can't do that, I feel guilty."I could see how housewives have a tendency to lost their identities. They are just fixtures around the house..."

One of the tension- builders was Sarah's and Steve's differing views on food stamps. Steve felt when he worked he was paying for the stamps, so he "wouldn't mind getting them when I need them."

Sarah, one of seven children of a poor family whose father died when she was 9, was "dead set against using food stamps."

"She told me 'if we go on food stamps, you're going to the grocery store alone,' " Steve said. "She wouldn't be able to face the checkout girl we go to every time. Her family never got any kind of welfare or any thing, and it's just in her that way."

Steve's relationships with son Joey, 5, and daughter Mairann, 2, were both strained and aided by his constant presence at home.

"I'd say we grew closer together, but then, we were pretty close already," Steve said. "But sometimes they got on my nerves, too."

Things that keep little people happy had to be put aside.

"We never used to buy them a lot of toys, but sometimes if we were downtown, we might have bought a small toy or candy bar. We couldn't do that when I was off. We all used to go out to eat once a week, but we had to stop doing that, too."

There was also a decrease in the number of family-type movies, time payment purchases, etc.

"It was gas, food, clothing and bills," Steve said. "You just couldn't branch out."

The possibility he might fall behind in his bills was a concern, but Steve and Sarah were in better shape than some.

"The way I looked at it, creditors are people," Steve said. "Our credit was good, we always paid our bills. If we had gotten into a bind I'm fairly confident they'd have gone along with us for a reasonable time."

Steve and Sarah bought their two-bedroom home a year ago, and the insurance and mortgage were due in August. Also due then were car insurance and payments on the car, plus a life insurance premium.

"I know that sounds like poor timing, but that's when we bought things, and that's the way it all worked out." The payments were covered that time, but some things suffered because of it.

"Well, I wanted to buy Joey a raincoat, but there wasn't any way then, And I wanted to put my car in the garage and get some dents out and get it tuned up so I could sell it. It's too small for us now."

But it would have cost $100 over the insurance settlement. The car is still unrepaired.

Why didn't Steve find another job?

"If I had gone off unemployment and got a job, I'd have had to make $3.50 an hour just to break even. I was clearing $85 a week for doing nothing, and if I could get a job for $2 an hour, 40 hours a week, that was only $80. That was a $5 cut right there, and that was gross pay, not take home," he said. "I wanted to do the best for my family just like the next guy, and I just couldn't see where taking a cut like that was going to get us anywhere."

He says he looked all over the area fora job, but "for my level of training there just isn't much."

One local factory was hiring, but he had gone to work there during a previous layoff, then returned to his old job when it opened up again.

"Do you think they'd have hired me? ", he asked, referring to the opening.

But with all the money problems, the hardest thing for Steve to get used to was doing without the comraderie with his fellow workers.

"I missed the fun of being with the guys during and after work."

And Steve said he missed the things that gave him personal enjoyment.

"I couldn't go out and spend $5 or $10 there anymore. I just couldn't afford it."

He now appreciates more what money can do, and says when money startes coming in regularly, he will begin a money management plan.

"It makes a difference if you know that money is there if you need it," he says.

New Madrid teacher and parent conferences scheduled Oct. 27-28

HOWARDVILLE — Roy Hon, director of elementary education in the New Madrid County R-1 Enlarged School District, has announced that personal conferences between teachers and parents of each child enrolled in kindergarten, learning disabilities and first grade are planned Oct. 27 and 28 in all district schools.

Conferences for parents of kindergarten pupils will be scheduled on both days. Parents of learning disabilities and first grade pupils will be scheduled for conference on Oct. 27 only. Conferences will be held on the night of Oct. 27 for employed parents who are unable to come during the day.

Initiated in 1974, the conferences are scheduled in October and again in March as a replacement for the report card and other forms of written communication between parents and teachers.

Hon said teachers and administrators realize they cannot do the best possible job of educating each pupil without the help of the pupil's parents. Parents can supply information about the pupil that is very useful to the teacher.

The teacher can offer suggestions to parents on how they can help with the education process at home. The best way to discuss such matters is an informal face-to-face meeting. It gives both teacher and parent an opportunity for full exploration of the pupil's progress, behavior and the reasons behind his successes and failures, Hon added.

Parent participation exceeded 90 per cent at the fall conference in the 1974-75 school year. School officials are expecting a good response from parents again.

Employes benefits increased

NEW MADRID — City employe retirement benefits were increased and park and utility improvements were discussed at the City Council meeting Monday night.

Retiring employes of the city will have a 25 per cent increase in benefits under the Missouri Local Government Employes Retirement System (LAGERS) following the council's unanimous vote to accept the new plan avaliable to employes retiring after Sept. 28, 1975.

Under the increased benefits plan, the city's contribution to the fund will be increased from $7,209 per year to $10,413, an increase of $3,240 per year.

The council was advised that construction of the new tennis courts and volley ball courts at the Mills Street and O'Bannon city parks should be completed this week and that blacktop surfacing is being applied.

City administartor Don Lloyd reported on a meeting at Cape Girardeau concerning future requirements for the transmission of electrical current by Southwest Power Authority to the city and other area towns. Lloyd said SPA was trying to put together a longrange area plan for the Wheeling of electrical current for future requirements.

The council authorized a contract with the firm of Phelps and Hogland Engineering Company of Raytown for an electrical rate and systems study to be conducted at an estimated cost of $9,000.

Purpose of the studies is to determine usage in the various categories of electrical customers such as residential, commercial and manufacturing and to estimate the cost of future improvements and expansion of the electrical system and to propose rates which will permit the city to pay for the improvements.

A request by Woodrow Akins, for the city water line to be extended to his residence, located about three-fourths of a mile west of Highway 61 and Scott Street intersection, was tabled. Also discussed was the extension of water lines and installation of fire plugs on Old Kingshighway. This was also tabled for additional study.

The audit of the Municipal Light and Power books for fiscal year 1974 was approved. Howard C. Tillman certified public accountant of Portageville, was authorized to complete an audit of the City of New Madrid books for the years 1972 through 1974.

Cooking Up

By CHERIE BLANTON

I don't know about you but on Halloween I always have some sort of a special treat put back for all the neighbor children that visit me from time to time. Here are some recipes for goodies that are sure to keep the goblins and the witches away for at least one more year.

POPCORN BALLS

2 cups sugar
Two-thirds cup light corn syrup
Two-thirds cup water
½ cup margarine
2 tsp. salt
1½ tsp. vanilla
6 quarts popped corn

Combine sugar, syrup, water, margarine and salt in a saucepan; cook until mixture is brittle when tested in cold water. add vanilla. Pour in a fine stream over popcorn, tossing lightly with a large fork to coat evenly. Grease fingertips and shape mixture into balls, pressing popcorn together very lightly. Makes about 3 dozen balls.

APPLES-ON-A-STICK

8 medium size red apples
3 cups sugar
½ cup light corn syrup
½ cup water
1 drop oil of cinnamon
1 tsp. red food coloring

Wash and dry apples; remove stems. Insert wooden skewers in stem end of apples. Combine sugar, syrup and water in a heavy, deep saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture boils.

Then cook without stirring to soft crack stage (285 degrees) or until a small amount separates into threads that are hard but not brittle when tested in very cold water. Remove from heat; add oil of cinnamon and food coloring and stir only enough to mix.

Hold each apple skewer and quickly twirl in syrup, tilting pan to cover apple. Remove from syrup and allow excess to drip off; then twirl to spread syrup smoothly over each apple. Place on a lightly buttered baking sheet to cool and store in a cool place.

CRISP HALLOWEEN COOKIES

2½ cups all-purpose flour
1 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. baking soda
½ tsp. salt
1½ tsp. cinamon
1 tsp. ground ginger
1 tsp. ground cloves
½ tsp. nutmeg
½ cup oleo
½ cup sugar
½ cup molasses
1 egg

Sift together flour, baking powder, soda, salt, and spices. Cream shortening, sugar and molasses; add egg and mix thoroughly. Add dry ingredients to creamed mixture, beating well. Chill one and a half hours. Roll out to one-eighth inch thickness on lightly-floured board. Cut with two and a half inch round cookie cutter.

For cat face cookies, make ears with two small triangles of dough pressed into top edge of cookie rounds. For witches, make hats by pressing a small triangle of dough on the top edges of cookie rounds. Bake on lightly greased cookie sheets at 350 degrees for five to seven minutes. Cool and decorate as desired. Yield: 8 dozen cookies.

ORANGE FROSTING

2 cups powdered sugar
2 Tbsp. orange juice
½ tsp. vanilla
yellow food coloring

Combine all ingredients; beat well in mixer. Frost cookies as desire. Makes enough for 10 dozen cookies.

Bob Hope celebrates 25th year

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Hope celebrates his 25-year romance with the television tube Friday night with a two-hour special featuring himself and 97 other stars from his past shows.

comedian is certain he has a hit.

"Why? Because of Dolores," he explained. "She has always been my worst critic. Many times after a show she'll tell me, 'That didn't make it.' I'll say, 'What are you talking about? The audience loved it.'

That doesn't matter to her; she's still a critic from 'class' standpoint.

"I took her to see a two-hour-and-40-minute compilation of the television shows. You know what she said? 'It's a shame to cut a foot of it.'"

Painfully, Hope and producer Paul Keyes cut the collection of clips to 90 minutes, the rest of the show being occupied by commercials and by tomfoolery with Hope pals Bing Crosby, John Wayne and Frank Sinatra. The four stars taped the interludes last week at NBC.

"Bob Hope's Quarter-century of Comedy" will offer a time capsule of show business history as well as a view of the extents to which Hope would go to induce laughter. Such as fighting with heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano, Bing playing the referee, the sketch ending up in a waltz that included Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney the situation bears some logic, since Hope once boxed as Packy East.

"I've got Maurice Chevalier making his first appearance on television," the 72-year-old comedian recounted. "And Jimmy Durante singing 'September Song,' a sequence that makes people cry. I talked Jimmy into doing the song, remembering when Walter Huston used to do it."

Preparing the show was no simple scissors-and-paste job. Hope and staff spent two weeks reading through the 800 sketches he has performed on television. After they made the selections, the matter of clearances had to be faced.

"I had to pay every writer, and all the performers receive a minimum salary," he said. "Permission had to be gotten from each star. Ingrid Bergman replied, 'Bob can do anything he wants.' The only permission I'm waiting for is Barbra Streisand, who wanted to see a copy of the tape. She was on my show before she did 'Funny Girl.'"

Included in the show will be Hope's jibes at Presidents Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon and Ford. "That's the greatest source of comedy: picking on the biggies," he observes.

Hope admitted he is doing more now than at any time in his career. He had been in New York the previous day, appeared at a luncheon, taped a full-hour "Tomorrow" show and performed at the Radio City Music Hall. He had flown to Los Angeles, napping three hours in flight, and that night was appearing at UCLA for basketball coach John Wooden's retirement party.

Bentsen favors national health insurance plan

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a Texas candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, says he's in favor of national health insurance, but that it "must be phased in over a period of time."

"I think we're going to have to bring about some form of national health insurance, "Bentsen said in an interview taped for broadcast Sunday.

"I don't think it's right in this country that someone has to take personal bankruptcy when they have a long-term, serious illness on the part of a loved one.

"I'm not trying to disrupt the traditional doctor-patient relationship. I don't think we have to do that at all," The Texas Democrat added.

Although he voted against federal revenue sharing for states and local communities when it was first proposed, Bentsen said he was now in favor of that financial program because "we have no choice but to continue it." He said it would be "catastrophic" to cut local governments off from revenue sharing funds, since they have now come to depend on them.

Asked about a recent Harris survey that showed Bentsen to be the choice of only two per cent of the independents and Democrats questioned, the senator said, "I don't think the people know who they're for. A lot of people are looking for a new face. I'm trying to convince them it's mine."

Scott Central school board hears report of district audit

MORLEY — The Scott County Central R-5 School District Board of Education Monday night accepted an audit of the district's books for the fiscal year ending June 30 after hearing a report presented by Jim Clay of the Spitzmiller, Hobbs & Clay accounting firm of Sikeston.

The board adopted a policy regarding maternity leave for teachers that includes the following requirements:

Requests must be submitted to administrative supervision no later than the third month of pregnancy; the leave starting date shall be mutually agreed upon by the teacher, principal and superintendent, provided the teacher has written permission from her doctor to continue teaching until that date.

The end of the leave shall be mutually agreed upon provided the end of the leave shall not be more than eight weeks after delivery and the teacher has her doctor's permission to return to teaching; absence for maternity leave shall be counted in determining experience on a salary schedule; and absence for this leave shall not be considered as sick leave.

In other business, an additional $200 per year over the regular contract was authorized for the coach of the volleyball team.

The board also approved purchase of a kiln for the ceramics class at a cost of $350 and trees to be planted in the spring at cost of $420 and accepted a $405.86 bid from OzArc Gas & Supply Inc. of Sikeston for purchase and lease of welding equipment to be used in the industrial arts shop.

Chaffee school board receives bids on bus

CHAFFEE — The Chaffee R-2 Board of Education on Monday accepted a bid for the sale of a 1961 school bus and postponed action on proposed lighting for the high school.

A $505 bid by G.E. Faulkner accepted for the bus. Other bids included $300 by Leon Bucher and $427 by R. G. Sullivan.

An estimate was read from Missouri Utilities on materials and labor to install five area lights at the high school at a cost of $2,081. It was decided to check on other means of providing lighting for the grounds.

The board was notified of an area workshop and school finance hearing to be held today at Ramada Inn of Sikeston.

A $25 per night charge to use the gymnasium for non-school activity was approved, effective Jan. 1, 1976.

The board noted that a solid oak trophy case has been installed in the high school lobby with funds from the Mark Whitaker Memorial Fund. Whitaker was a student who died of injuries received in a 1974 school football game.

A vote of thanks and support was extended to the high school band for its first and second place trophies in a recent festival at Kennett.

Eagleton introduces bill aimed at child reading motivation

WASHINGTON — Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., has introduced, along with Sen. J. Glenn Beall, R-Md., a bill which is designed to motivate children to learn to read through an inexpensive book distribution program.

The bill authorizes the U.S. commissioner of education to channel funds through national organizations established to promote reading education which, in turn, would make arrangements with local community groups or local schools to distribute books to children.

Project sponsors must arrange with local community groups to pay 50 per cent of the cost of book distribution. At least half the funds must be awarded to areas with high concentrations of children from low-income families. The program would be funded at $4 million the first year and $9 million each of the following two years.

The legislation is patterned after Reading Is FUNdamental (RIF), a program developed through private efforts which motivates children to read for pleasure by giving them books which they themselves chose. Evaluations of these programs show that they have stimulated an interest in books and reading in many children who had been previously indifferent to books, and have significantly increased the reading ability of participants.

In Missouri, five RIF programs are in operation. In Belleview, 227 children in grades kindergarten through eighth of the Belleview R-3 School District are participating in the program sponsored by the PTA. In Bolivar, the PTA has provided 500 books for 200 children in the past year. The Fayette program, sponsored by the American Association of University Women, includes 64 third graders and will pick up new third graders next year as it follows the current participants to fourth grade.

"In my view," Eagleton said, "inadequate reading ability is the major problem in our educational system today. The Right to Read Office in the U.S. Office of Education estimates that 40 to 50 per cent of the students in urban areas have reading difficulties and that some 10 million elementary and secondary schoolchildren across the country are severely deficient in reading.

"I find these estimates shocking. Reading is the most basic tool for learning – if our children are not being taught to read, we can never improve the quality of education."

The two senators' bill will be offered as an amendment to the Reading Improvement Program authorized in 1974, also sponsored by Eagleton and Beall, which provides for teacher training in the techniques of reading instruction and for more concentrated reading instruction.

Firing of officer stirs controversy

CHAFFEE — Controversial subjects before the City Council Monday night included the firing of a police officer and a change in an ordinance authorizing more package liquor stores, and between 40 and 50 residents opposed to both measures were present for the meeting.

The firing controversy concerned officer Charles Benson, who had been dismissed last Thursday because of charges filed against him by Police Chief Elmer Trost, including breach of discipline, conduct unbecoming a police officer and unprofessionalism.

Sue Teegarden, a local merchant who attended the meeting, said there are enough mercants in town willing to provide an attorney for Benson if needed.

However, the council ruled that he be reinstated with pay. Then, after deliberation, the council put Benson on suspension with pay pending an investigation and hearing.

In reference to the ordinance to allow more package liquor stores, Mayor Robert Capshaw read a list of 607 persons who had signed a petition against changing the ordinance.

Capshaw polled the council to see if any members wished to change their votes before the reading of the new ordinance.

Councilmen O. E. Rigdon and Bill Whistler said they would not change at this time, but would be checking in their wards before the next reading.

The first reading of the ordinance was approved.

Scott Central school board hears report of district audit

MORLEY — The Scott County Central R-5 School District Board of Education Monday night accepted an audit of the district's books for the fiscal year ending June 30 after hearing a report presented by Jim Clay of the Spitzmiller, Hobbs & Clay accounting firm of Sikeston.

The board adopted a policy regarding maternity leave for teachers that includes the following requirements:

Requests must be submitted to administrative supervision no later than the third month of pregnancy; the leave starting date shall be mutually agreed upon by the teacher, principal and superintendent, provided the teacher has written permission from her doctor to continue teaching until that date.

The end of the leave shall be mutually agreed upon provided the end of the leave shall not be more than eight weeks after delivery and the teacher has her doctor's permission to return to teaching; absence for maternity leave shall be counted in determining experience on a salary schedule; and absence for this leave shall not be considered as sick leave.

In other business, an additional $200 per year over the regular contract was authorized for the coach of the volleyball team.

The board also approved purchase of a kiln for the ceramics class at a cost of $350 and trees to be planted in the spring at cost of $420 and accepted a $405.86 bid from OzArc Gas & Supply Inc. of Sikeston for purchase and lease of welding equipment to be used in the industrial arts shop.

Chaffee school board receives bids on bus

CHAFFEE — The Chaffee R-2 Board of Education on Monday accepted a bid for the sale of a 1961 school bus and postponed action on proposed lighting for the high school.

A $505 bid by G.E. Faulkner accepted for the bus. Other bids included $300 by Leon Bucher and $427 by R. G. Sullivan.

An estimate was read from Missouri Utilities on materials and labor to install five area lights at the high school at a cost of $2,081. It was decided to check on other means of providing lighting for the grounds.

The board was notified of an area workshop and school finance hearing to be held today at Ramada Inn of Sikeston.

A $25 per night charge to use the gymnasium for non-school activity was approved, effective Jan. 1, 1976.

The board noted that a solid oak trophy case has been installed in the high school lobby with funds from the Mark Whitaker Memorial Fund. Whitaker was a student who died of injuries received in a 1974 school football game.

A vote of thanks and support was extended to the high school band for its first and second place trophies in a recent festival at Kennett.

WASHINGTON — Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., has introduced, along with Sen. J. Glenn Beall, R-Md., a bill which is designed to motivate children to learn to read through an inexpensive book distribution program.

The bill authorizes the U.S. commissioner of education to channel funds through national organizations established to promote reading education which, in turn, would make arrangements with local community groups or local schools to distribute books to children.

Project sponsors must arrange with local community groups to pay 50 per cent of the cost of book distribution. At least half the funds must be awarded to areas with high concentrations of children from low-income families. The program would be funded at $4 million the first year and $9 million each of the following two years.

The legislation is patterned after Reading Is FUNdamental (RIF), a program developed through private efforts which motivates children to read for pleasure by giving them books which they themselves chose. Evaluations of these programs show that they have stimulated an interest in books and reading in many children who had been previously indifferent to books, and have significantly increased the reading ability of participants.

In Missouri, five RIF programs are in operation. In Belleview, 227 children in grades kindergarten through eighth of the Belleview R-3 School District are participating in the program sponsored by the PTA. In Bolivar, the PTA has provided 500 books for 200 children in the past year. The Fayette program, sponsored by the American Association of University Women, includes 64 third graders and will pick up new third graders next year as it follows the current participants to fourth grade.

"In my view," Eagleton said, "inadequate reading ability is the major problem in our educational system today. The Right to Read Office in the U.S. Office of Education estimates that 40 to 50 per cent of the students in urban areas have reading difficulties and that some 10 million elementary and secondary schoolchildren across the country are severely deficient in reading.

"I find these estimates shocking. Reading is the most basic tool for learning – if our children are not being taught to read, we can never improve the quality of education."

The two senators' bill will be offered as an amendment to the Reading Improvement Program authorized in 1974, also sponsored by Eagleton and Beall, which provides for teacher training in the techniques of reading instruction and for more concentrated reading instruction.

Harriet Jones

Harriet Jones, 107 Ruth St., has explored such art medias as wood, metal, plastic, terra cotta, stained glass, cement, foam, glass, plaster and even kinetic or movable art. However, she is most known for her sculpture work and will exhibit about 43 realistic and semi-abstract pieces from medias mentioned above.

Ms. Jones has received her master's degree in art from Peabody College at Nashville, Tenn. and has studied at Montevallo University at Montevallo, Ala. and American and George Washington University at Washington, D.C.

Her career is glittered with awards from such competitive shows at the Smithsonian Institution and Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D.C.; the Watkins Institute at Nashville, Tenn.; Shaw's Gardens and the Gateway Gallery at St. Louis; and the Springfield Art Museum at Springfield. At the local level, she was a recipient for an achievement award by the Business & Professional Women's Club.

Art League opens gallery

Sikeston's newest addition to the cultural arts is the Sikeston Art League's permanent art gallery, upstairs in the McCoy-Tanner Building on East Center Street across from the Bank of Sikeston.

The grand opening will be from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday, highlighted by an 67-piece exhibition by two local women artists for two weeks. The Coalesce Club will host a reception at the grand opening for Dianne Dickerson Hahs, known for her work in expressionistic oils and acrylics, and Harriet Jones, a well-known sculpturess.

As a special feature, Ms. Jones will show a number of pieces of knietic art – some activated by music with colored lights and others with motorized parts that form an infinite number of patterns.

The two-woman show will run two consecutive weeks and will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays; other times will be posted inside the gallery.

Dianne Hahs

Dianne Dickerson Hahs, 508 School St., is an expressionistic artist of oils and acrylics and also does pen and ink drawings of landscapes and of the human figure. She will exhibit about 24 pieces of her work at the show.

She received her bachelor's degree from Northwestern Louisiana State College at Natchitoches, La. and spent the summer of 1972 studying art in Italy and Greece. She has taught art for several years in the Sikeston Public Schools and is working on her master's degree in art at Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau.

Mrs. Hahs' work has been exhibited in shows at Northwestern Louisiana State College at Monroe, La., SeMo State University and at shows sponsored by the Sikeston Art League.

In 1969, Mrs. Hahs was listed as one of the nation's outstanding art teachers by "Grade Teacher" magazine. In 1973, she was named Outstanding Young Educator by the Sikeston Junior Chamber of Commerce and as one of the Outstanding Young Women of America.

today's woman

"more spice than everything nice"

Women shy away from political offices

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. — Although more and more women are running for public office, very few expect to make a try for the highest offices, even at the peak of their careers, according to a study on women's attitudes.

Another finding was that the "new political woman," who is seeking elective office today is a little younger than the average woman who ran for office in the past but otherwise not very different.

High school girls who are strongly interested in politics, another study found, tend to have one key factor in their backgrounds that distinguishes them from girls who are not interested in politics: They have mothers who work outside the home in high-status jobs.

These findings of academic researchers were among the dozens that were presented at a conference on "Women in Politics" at Adelphi University.

The conference brought together 250 political scientists, sociologists, psychologists and women active in politics. The conference's organizer was Bernice Cummings, a sociologist.

The finding that even women who already have begun a political career still have relatively low aspirations for themselves as presented to the meeting by Sister Maureen Fiedler, who reported on research done by herself and Jeane Kirkpatrick, a professor of political science at Georgetown University.

They interviewed 1,336 delegates to the 1972 Democratic and Republican Conventions, half of them men and half women, and also sent questionnaires to additional delegates.

They found that only among the delegates pledged to the presidential candidacy of Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D.-N.Y., was the proportion of women who had ambitions for the highest offices as large as the proportion of men with such aspirations.

Sister Maureen said delegates who expressed the hope of ultimately holding the office of president, senator, member of the house of representatives, governor or member of the president's cabinet were counted as having "high ambition." Among the Chisholm delegates, 65 per cent of the women and 57 per cent of the men had such high ambitions.

Kirkpatrick and Sister Maureen also found while 37 per cent of both the Democratic and Republican men thought they could achieve the highest office they aspired to, only 12 per cent of the Democratic women thought they would achieve their highest ambition and only 7 per cent of the Republican women.

Philip Goldberg, associate professor of psychology at Connecticut College, reported on research that showed that both men's and women's opinions of the abilities of women had risen in the last 20 years, but that both men and women still had a tendency to think they would not like a woman who was involved in nontraditional activities, such as politics.

Pork prices are steady

Beef—that's a different story. On seven main cuts of beef, retailers raised prices from slight to as much as 13 cents per pound. This change from the previous downward trend of last week was not in line with lower to steady prices for the producer.

All other items surveyed by the Farm Bureau were down from last week, except a 10-pound bag of red potatoes, which went from $1.29 to $1.38. Lower prices this week are reflected in chickens, milk, eggs and sugar. Grade A large eggs were off a nickel a dozen to 68 cents.

Moving into the holiday season, next week Farm Bureau shoppers will be pricing turkeys through Christmas.

Latest book calls rape weapon of chilling fear

NEW YORK (AP) — Susan Brownmiller calls herself the world's leading authority on rape.

"It's the most immodest statement I've ever made in my life, but it's true," said Ms. Brownmiller, who as a leader in feminist movement prefers that designation. "There never were any authorities on rape before. It remained for the woman's movement to lead us to explain our own terrorization and oppression through rape."

Ms. Brownmiller's book, "Against our Will — Men, Women and Rape," is a prodigious analysis of the history and meaning of rape. It has been hailed by some as the most important feminist treatise since "Sexual Politics" and "The Female Eunuch." It is an important book about the relationships between men and women, most critics who have reviewed it agree.

In a relentless, often chilling, presentation of case histories, statistics, legal interpretations throughout the ages, Ms. Brownmiller argues her case that rape is "nothing more or less than a conscious process of intimidation by which all men keep all women in a state of fear."

She examines interracial rape, homosexual rape in prisons, psychology and rape, war and rape and much more.

"I wanted to destroy all the myths about rape — that women ask for it, that the only rapists are sexual psychopaths, that no woman can be raped against her will. I wanted to make a contribution to the world's thinking," said Ms. Brownmiller. "Everything I am and everything I ever wanted to be are in that book."

Ms. Brownmiller, whose background includes journalism and two years as a civil rights worker in Mississippi, was a pioneer activist in the woman's movement.

The book took four years of reseach and writing, said Ms. Brownmiller, 40. "There were moments when I thought I would never finish. I was asking all those questions that had never been asked before," she said.

Ms. Brownmiller says she is offended when people ask if she herself has been raped.

"I simply would not have had the emotional stamina to do the book," said Ms. Brownmiller. But she said that only a feminist could have rediscovered and redefined rape.

"One has to start with the experience of the raped woman and accept it at face value," she said.

Her advice to women regarding rape is "know your own rights. Be a strong woman. Don't be afraid."

If she were ever in a rape situation herself, she says, "I would fight to the death. I would never submit. I'd go down fighting. There's no assurance that the rapist isn't going to kill you after you submit anyway. Look at the Richard Speck murders."

But Ms. Brownmiller says rape is a crime that can be eliminated.

"Once it was said that slavery and lynching would never be abolished. They were. But we need the help of men. Men must cease to support the rapists among them," she said.

Gonorrhea epidemic spreads in Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY — The gonorrhea epidemic is spreading in Missouri, Dr. Herbert R. Domke, director of the Missouri Division of Health, reported. The epidemic increase is occurring in outstate Missouri among white persons and teenagers and females, a shift from the traditional patterns of the past, Domke said. In the past, gonorrhea was predominantly in male patients from the nonwhite population areas of St. Louis and Kansas City.

The numbers of gonorrhea cases reported in males and from the metropolitan centers have increased very little since 1967, compared to the tripling of cases in the state's nonmetro regions and among females and the 146 per cent increase in cases among white Missourians. In addition, gonorrhea in teenagers rose 56 per cent.

Statewide, Missouri reported 16,170 gonorrhea cases in 1974, a rise of 54 per cent over 1967. Domke said increased sexual promiscuity in both males and females apparently is responsible for the upward surge in gonorrhea.

Raymond By, director of the Missouri venereal disease program, says the gonorrhea increase in nonmetro areas has been explosive. The 200 per cent jump in cases between 1967 and 1974 in this region was ten times the comparable increase in St. Louis and five times the increase in Kansas City. During 1974, nonmetro Missouri accounted for 29 per cent of the state's gonorrhea cases.

Percentagewise, gonorrhea has increased more sharply among whites than nonwhites in all parts of the state. There were 273 per cent more cases reported in whites living in nonmetro regions last year than during 1967, and 64 per cent more reported in their metro counterparts.

The tripling of gonorrhea in Missouri females includes 256 per cent increase in white and 171 per cent increase in nonwhite female cases. The largest increase was in outstate Missouri white females (436 per cent) and the smallest was among Kansas City nonwhite females (79 per cent).

Bly credits some of the apparent increase of gonorrhea in women to improved case finding and reporting. He said laboratory tests to detect gonorrhea are improved and now find cases which previously went undetected. Testing is now routinely performed in more than 100 clinics throughout the state operated by hospitals, family planning agencies and other groups which provide obstetrical and gynecological services. In addition, there are eight venereal disease clinics which diagnose and treat persons with a venereal disease. The activities of these clinics have led to the discovery and reporting of large numbers of gonorrhea cases in women.

Gonorrhea in persons 19 years of age and younger increased 56 per cent from 1967 to 1974, but due to the general increase in all ages, teenagers continued to represent slightly more than one-fourth of all gonorrhea cases reported statewide. Most of the teenage increase occurred in females whose cases went up 213 per cent, as compared to only four per cent increase in males. The increase among white teenagers was seven times that in nonwhite teenagers.

Domke said gonorrhea has continued to increase in 1975 with 13,360 cases reported in the first nine months, or 15 per cent more than the 11,593 cases during the same part of 1974.

In addition, there has been 23.5 per cent increase during the first three quarters of 1975 in reported cases of nongonococcal urethritis, a venereal disease also known as nonspecific urethritis (N SU). This disease mimics the symptoms of gonorrhea and complicates the clinical diagnosis of gonorrhea in males.

Gonorrhea control efforts are complicated by the public and some physicians who assume the diagnosis and undertake treatment without confirmation of disease through laboratory analysis. This concerns health officials because many of the cases diagnosed and reported as gonorrhea may in reality be nonspecific urethritis (NSU). Accurate diagnosis is important because NSU usually will not respond to penicillin, the preferred treatment for gonorrhea. A patient with NSU but being treated for gonorrhea will return time after time seeking relief from his disease.

On the plus side in venereal disease control, Domke said one-third fewer cases of infectious syphilis have been reported so far in 1975 compared to the same part of 1974, which indicates the infectious syphilis epidemics in St. Louis and Kansas City are declining as a result of intensified control efforts.

Bly said he is pleased with the way the infectious syphilis outbreak is being controlled statewide. He warned, however, that just because syphilis is declining, efforts must not be relaxed.

Beef cut prices soared 13 cents

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Beef prices in several categories soared as much as 13 cents a pound this week, according to a check of average prices made by the Mieeouri Farm Bureau Shoppers' Guide.

T+Bone steak led the beef cuts in price increases to $2.34 per pound, followed closely by the 12-cent increase in the price of sirloin steak to $2.11 per pound. Arm roast, rib steak, round steak and ground beef all increased in price, with ground beef going up three cents to $.81 per pound.

The boost in beef prices is a reversal of a downward trend of last week, and was not in line with lower to steady prices for the producer, the guide said.

Wholesale pork prices continued their downward trend, but grocery stores in Missouri did not lower their prices. According to the guide, pork prices in three of five categories remained the same, one increased three cents and one dropped a penny.

All other items surveyed by the Farm Bureau were down from last week, except a 10-pound bag of red potatoes, when went from $1.29 to $1.38. Lower prices this week are reflected in chickens, milk, eggs and sugar.

Rubber pants help only temporarily

Dear Ann: I've read your column for many years and I enjoy it. However, as a nurse, I must say I was surprised to see your response to chronic bedwetters.

I agree that a chronic bedwetter should take every precaution against damage (and embarrassment) but that 22-year-old who thinks he's found a solution to his problem by wearing a diaper and rubber pants is mistaken. Wearing a diaper and-or rubber pants solves the problem of embarrassment and damage, but it does nothing to solve the problem of bedwetting.

He needs to SEE A DOCTOR! There's a reason (be it physical or psychological) for bedwetting and he should find out what it is and do something about it. Please Ann, tell him, so the degradation, inconsideration, humiliation (and diapers) won't be necessary. I'm counting on you! – Mrs. K.

Dear Mrs. K.: Of course you're right. Bedwetting by anyone over three years of age is a symptom of another problem -- either organic or emotional. (My experts tell me it's at least 90 per cent emotional.) Therapy is needed for adults who have the problem. Counseling is definitely in order for both the mother and the child who swims ashore every night.

Thank you for hauling me back and insisting on a better answer.

Dear Ann Landers: What is your opinion of married couples working in the same office? We have two such couples and they are both trouble.

My immediate superior married a young woman who is supposed to be my assistant. She comes in late half the time, departs early, takes two-hour lunches, and her work stinks. Since her husband is my boss, I find it difficult to say anything. At the same time, I realize I'm being unfair to the others in this department.

The second couple met here last year. They are a pair of nitwits with no sense of propriety or judgment. When they aren't kissing behind the water cooler they are holding hands by the file cabinet. Several employees have commented on their tasteless behavior but the kooks don't seem to have gotten the message.

Will you comment please? -- Too Much Is Plenty

Dear Plenty: I would not make a flat-out statement that married people should never be employed in the same office, because in some instances it works out well.

Generally speaking, however, it's not a good idea -- and for the reasons you mention, plus another. Too much togetherness can put the dead hand on any relationship.

Harriet Jones

Harriet Jones, 107 Ruth St., has explored such art medias as wood, metal, plastic, terra cotta, stained glass, cement, foam, glass, plaster and even kinetic or movable art. However, she is most known for her sculpture work and will exhibit about 43 realistic and semi-abstract pieces from medias mentioned above.

Ms. Jones has received her master's degree in art from Peabody College at Nashville, Tenn. and has studied at Montevallo University at Montevallo, Ala. and American and George Washington University at Washington, D.C.

Her career is glittered with awards from such competitive shows at the Smithsonian Institution and Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D.C.; the Watkins Institute at Nashville, Tenn.; Shaw's Gardens and the Gateway Gallery at St. Louis; and the Springfield Art Museum at Springfield. At the local level, she was a recipient for an achievement award by the Business & Professional Women's Club.

Art League opens gallery

Sikeston's newest addition to the cultural arts is the Sikeston Art League's permanent art gallery, upstairs in the McCoy-Tanner Building on East Center Street across from the Bank of Sikeston.

The grand opening will be from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday, highlighted by an 67-piece exhibition by two local women artists for two weeks. The Coalesce Club will host a reception at the grand opening for Dianne Dickerson Hahs, known for her work in expressionistic oils and acrylics, and Harriet Jones, a well-known sculpturess.

As a special feature, Ms. Jones will show a number of pieces of knietic art – some activated by music with colored lights and others with motorized parts that form an infinite number of patterns.

The two-woman show will run two consecutive weeks and will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays; other times will be posted inside the gallery.

Dianne Hahs

Dianne Dickerson Hahs, 508 School St., is an expressionistic artist of oils and acrylics and also does pen and ink drawings of landscapes and of the human figure. She will exhibit about 24 pieces of her work at the show.

She received her bachelor's degree from Northwestern Louisiana State College at Natchitoches, La. and spent the summer of 1972 studying art in Italy and Greece. She has taught art for several years in the Sikeston Public Schools and is working on her master's degree in art at Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau.

Mrs. Hahs' work has been exhibited in shows at Northwestern Louisiana State College at Monroe, La., SeMo State University and at shows sponsored by the Sikeston Art League.

In 1969, Mrs. Hahs was listed as one of the nation's outstanding art teachers by "Grade Teacher" magazine. In 1973, she was named Outstanding Young Educator by the Sikeston Junior Chamber of Commerce and as one of the Outstanding Young Women of America.

today's woman

"more spice than everything nice"

Women shy away from political offices

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. — Although more and more women are running for public office, very few expect to make a try for the highest offices, even at the peak of their careers, according to a study on women's attitudes.

Another finding was that the "new political woman," who is seeking elective office today is a little younger than the average woman who ran for office in the past but otherwise not very different.

High school girls who are strongly interested in politics, another study found, tend to have one key factor in their backgrounds that distinguishes them from girls who are not interested in politics: They have mothers who work outside the home in high-status jobs.

These findings of academic researchers were among the dozens that were presented at a conference on "Women in Politics" at Adelphi University.

The conference brought together 250 political scientists, sociologists, psychologists and women active in politics. The conference's organizer was Bernice Cummings, a sociologist.

The finding that even women who already have begun a political career still have relatively low aspirations for themselves as presented to the meeting by Sister Maureen Fiedler, who reported on research done by herself and Jeane Kirkpatrick, a professor of political science at Georgetown University.

They interviewed 1,336 delegates to the 1972 Democratic and Republican Conventions, half of them men and half women, and also sent questionnaires to additional delegates.

They found that only among the delegates pledged to the presidential candidacy of Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D.-N.Y., was the proportion of women who had ambitions for the highest offices as large as the proportion of men with such aspirations.

Sister Maureen said delegates who expressed the hope of ultimately holding the office of president, senator, member of the house of representatives, governor or member of the president's cabinet were counted as having "high ambition." Among the Chisholm delegates, 65 per cent of the women and 57 per cent of the men had such high ambitions.

Kirkpatrick and Sister Maureen also found while 37 per cent of both the Democratic and Republican men thought they could achieve the highest office they aspired to, only 12 per cent of the Democratic women thought they would achieve their highest ambition and only 7 per cent of the Republican women.

Philip Goldberg, associate professor of psychology at Connecticut College, reported on research that showed that both men's and women's opinions of the abilities of women had risen in the last 20 years, but that both men and women still had a tendency to think they would not like a woman who was involved in nontraditional activities, such as politics.

Pork prices are steady

Beef—that's a different story. On seven main cuts of beef, retailers raised prices from slight to as much as 13 cents per pound. This change from the previous downward trend of last week was not in line with lower to steady prices for the producer.

All other items surveyed by the Farm Bureau were down from last week, except a 10-pound bag of red potatoes, which went from $1.29 to $1.38. Lower prices this week are reflected in chickens, milk, eggs and sugar. Grade A large eggs were off a nickel a dozen to 68 cents.

Moving into the holiday season, next week Farm Bureau shoppers will be pricing turkeys through Christmas.

Latest book calls rape weapon of chilling fear

NEW YORK (AP) — Susan Brownmiller calls herself the world's leading authority on rape.

"It's the most immodest statement I've ever made in my life, but it's true," said Ms. Brownmiller, who as a leader in feminist movement prefers that designation. "There never were any authorities on rape before. It remained for the woman's movement to lead us to explain our own terrorization and oppression through rape."

Ms. Brownmiller's book, "Against our Will — Men, Women and Rape," is a prodigious analysis of the history and meaning of rape. It has been hailed by some as the most important feminist treatise since "Sexual Politics" and "The Female Eunuch." It is an important book about the relationships between men and women, most critics who have reviewed it agree.

In a relentless, often chilling, presentation of case histories, statistics, legal interpretations throughout the ages, Ms. Brownmiller argues her case that rape is "nothing more or less than a conscious process of intimidation by which all men keep all women in a state of fear."

She examines interracial rape, homosexual rape in prisons, psychology and rape, war and rape and much more.

"I wanted to destroy all the myths about rape — that women ask for it, that the only rapists are sexual psychopaths, that no woman can be raped against her will. I wanted to make a contribution to the world's thinking," said Ms. Brownmiller. "Everything I am and everything I ever wanted to be are in that book."

Ms. Brownmiller, whose background includes journalism and two years as a civil rights worker in Mississippi, was a pioneer activist in the woman's movement.

The book took four years of reseach and writing, said Ms. Brownmiller, 40. "There were moments when I thought I would never finish. I was asking all those questions that had never been asked before," she said.

Ms. Brownmiller says she is offended when people ask if she herself has been raped.

"I simply would not have had the emotional stamina to do the book," said Ms. Brownmiller. But she said that only a feminist could have rediscovered and redefined rape.

"One has to start with the experience of the raped woman and accept it at face value," she said.

Her advice to women regarding rape is "know your own rights. Be a strong woman. Don't be afraid."

If she were ever in a rape situation herself, she says, "I would fight to the death. I would never submit. I'd go down fighting. There's no assurance that the rapist isn't going to kill you after you submit anyway. Look at the Richard Speck murders."

But Ms. Brownmiller says rape is a crime that can be eliminated.

"Once it was said that slavery and lynching would never be abolished. They were. But we need the help of men. Men must cease to support the rapists among them," she said.

Gonorrhea epidemic spreads in Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY — The gonorrhea epidemic is spreading in Missouri, Dr. Herbert R. Domke, director of the Missouri Division of Health, reported. The epidemic increase is occurring in outstate Missouri among white persons and teenagers and females, a shift from the traditional patterns of the past, Domke said. In the past, gonorrhea was predominantly in male patients from the nonwhite population areas of St. Louis and Kansas City.

The numbers of gonorrhea cases reported in males and from the metropolitan centers have increased very little since 1967, compared to the tripling of cases in the state's nonmetro regions and among females and the 146 per cent increase in cases among white Missourians. In addition, gonorrhea in teenagers rose 56 per cent.

Statewide, Missouri reported 16,170 gonorrhea cases in 1974, a rise of 54 per cent over 1967. Domke said increased sexual promiscuity in both males and females apparently is responsible for the upward surge in gonorrhea.

Raymond By, director of the Missouri venereal disease program, says the gonorrhea increase in nonmetro areas has been explosive. The 200 per cent jump in cases between 1967 and 1974 in this region was ten times the comparable increase in St. Louis and five times the increase in Kansas City. During 1974, nonmetro Missouri accounted for 29 per cent of the state's gonorrhea cases.

Percentagewise, gonorrhea has increased more sharply among whites than nonwhites in all parts of the state. There were 273 per cent more cases reported in whites living in nonmetro regions last year than during 1967, and 64 per cent more reported in their metro counterparts.

The tripling of gonorrhea in Missouri females includes 256 per cent increase in white and 171 per cent increase in nonwhite female cases. The largest increase was in outstate Missouri white females (436 per cent) and the smallest was among Kansas City nonwhite females (79 per cent).

Bly credits some of the apparent increase of gonorrhea in women to improved case finding and reporting. He said laboratory tests to detect gonorrhea are improved and now find cases which previously went undetected. Testing is now routinely performed in more than 100 clinics throughout the state operated by hospitals, family planning agencies and other groups which provide obstetrical and gynecological services. In addition, there are eight venereal disease clinics which diagnose and treat persons with a venereal disease. The activities of these clinics have led to the discovery and reporting of large numbers of gonorrhea cases in women.

Gonorrhea in persons 19 years of age and younger increased 56 per cent from 1967 to 1974, but due to the general increase in all ages, teenagers continued to represent slightly more than one-fourth of all gonorrhea cases reported statewide. Most of the teenage increase occurred in females whose cases went up 213 per cent, as compared to only four per cent increase in males. The increase among white teenagers was seven times that in nonwhite teenagers.

Domke said gonorrhea has continued to increase in 1975 with 13,360 cases reported in the first nine months, or 15 per cent more than the 11,593 cases during the same part of 1974.

In addition, there has been 23.5 per cent increase during the first three quarters of 1975 in reported cases of nongonococcal urethritis, a venereal disease also known as nonspecific urethritis (N SU). This disease mimics the symptoms of gonorrhea and complicates the clinical diagnosis of gonorrhea in males.

Gonorrhea control efforts are complicated by the public and some physicians who assume the diagnosis and undertake treatment without confirmation of disease through laboratory analysis. This concerns health officials because many of the cases diagnosed and reported as gonorrhea may in reality be nonspecific urethritis (NSU). Accurate diagnosis is important because NSU usually will not respond to penicillin, the preferred treatment for gonorrhea. A patient with NSU but being treated for gonorrhea will return time after time seeking relief from his disease.

On the plus side in venereal disease control, Domke said one-third fewer cases of infectious syphilis have been reported so far in 1975 compared to the same part of 1974, which indicates the infectious syphilis epidemics in St. Louis and Kansas City are declining as a result of intensified control efforts.

Bly said he is pleased with the way the infectious syphilis outbreak is being controlled statewide. He warned, however, that just because syphilis is declining, efforts must not be relaxed.

Beef cut prices soared 13 cents

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Beef prices in several categories soared as much as 13 cents a pound this week, according to a check of average prices made by the Mieeouri Farm Bureau Shoppers' Guide.

T+Bone steak led the beef cuts in price increases to $2.34 per pound, followed closely by the 12-cent increase in the price of sirloin steak to $2.11 per pound. Arm roast, rib steak, round steak and ground beef all increased in price, with ground beef going up three cents to $.81 per pound.

The boost in beef prices is a reversal of a downward trend of last week, and was not in line with lower to steady prices for the producer, the guide said.

Wholesale pork prices continued their downward trend, but grocery stores in Missouri did not lower their prices. According to the guide, pork prices in three of five categories remained the same, one increased three cents and one dropped a penny.

All other items surveyed by the Farm Bureau were down from last week, except a 10-pound bag of red potatoes, when went from $1.29 to $1.38. Lower prices this week are reflected in chickens, milk, eggs and sugar.

Ann Landers

Rubber pants help only temporarily

Dear Ann: I've read your column for many years and I enjoy it. However, as a nurse, I must say I was surprised to see your response to chronic bedwetters.

I agree that a chronic bedwetter should take every precaution against damage (and embarrassment) but that 22-year-old who thinks he's found a solution to his problem by wearing a diaper and rubber pants is mistaken. Wearing a diaper and-or rubber pants solves the problem of embarrassment and damage, but it does nothing to solve the problem of bedwetting.

He needs to SEE A DOCTOR! There's a reason (be it physical or psychological) for bedwetting and he should find out what it is and do something about it. Please Ann, tell him, so the degradation, inconsideration, humiliation (and diapers) won't be necessary. I'm counting on you! – Mrs. K.

Dear Mrs. K.: Of course you're right. Bedwetting by anyone over three years of age is a symptom of another problem -- either organic or emotional. (My experts tell me it's at least 90 per cent emotional.) Therapy is needed for adults who have the problem. Counseling is definitely in order for both the mother and the child who swims ashore every night.

Thank you for hauling me back and insisting on a better answer.

Dear Ann Landers: What is your opinion of married couples working in the same office? We have two such couples and they are both trouble.

My immediate superior married a young woman who is supposed to be my assistant. She comes in late half the time, departs early, takes two-hour lunches, and her work stinks. Since her husband is my boss, I find it difficult to say anything. At the same time, I realize I'm being unfair to the others in this department.

The second couple met here last year. They are a pair of nitwits with no sense of propriety or judgment. When they aren't kissing behind the water cooler they are holding hands by the file cabinet. Several employees have commented on their tasteless behavior but the kooks don't seem to have gotten the message.

Will you comment please? -- Too Much Is Plenty

Dear Plenty: I would not make a flat-out statement that married people should never be employed in the same office, because in some instances it works out well.

Generally speaking, however, it's not a good idea -- and for the reasons you mention, plus another. Too much togetherness can put the dead hand on any relationship.

Joan Baez's 'Musical' LP Is Selling

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The slogan was "no sirens, no bombs and no Spanish" and Joan Baez's latest album, "Diamonds and Rust," is climbing the best-seller chart and about ready to go gold.

The slogan was really a joke, while she was making the album, Miss Baez says, "but A and M Records told me my records were not selling. I said, 'Okay, tell me how to make a commercial album and if it suits me, I'll try it.' I'm treated very well there. They were hoping I could put out an album that had some music on it, so I wouldn't go completely broke.

"My last album that sold anything was my first A and M, 'Come from the Shadows,' and it didn't sell particularly well either. It didn't exactly have a hard-sell cover on it — two old people being arrested. I think the guy in back of the cops is an agent."

In between came LPs "Where Are You Now, My Son?" and "Here's to Life."

Selections for the new album were chosen strictly for musicality, Miss Baez says. "I was very comfortable making a nonpolitical album. In some ways it is very liberating. I'm a musician. I made a music album. Musically, it is one of my best."

Last year, Miss Baez says, "I was almost constantly on concert tours because I was in the process of going broke. I went to Australia, New Zealand, Japan, Latin America, England, France and Italy. If I don't feel pressure, I love going to those places.

"Financially, I wasn't holding things together. It was bad business management. I have spent the last month and a half rearranging all those people and that's hard work, too.

"If I took the suggestion of my new people, if I work very, very hard for one year I'll be okay the rest of my life. I'll settle for working hard two months this year and being all right next year." An intensive tour was set up for July 6 to Aug. 10 and there'll be concerts during October.

"I want to hang out some with my child, Gabriel, who is 5. I want to be around if he needs me, not in Mozambique or somewhere.

"I went two years and did only benefits. Now I can't do any for a while, even for my favorite people. I have to find nice ways of saying no." Then Miss Baez adds that she might make an exception for the United Farm Workers and Amnesty International. Then, when she was in Boston, she did a free Bicentennial concert.

The July tour may produce a live album, Miss Baez says. "We might learn some new stuff plus me singing some of the oldie goldie things from the Vanguard albums might make a nice new direction. I sang 'The Lonesome Death of Hattie Carroll' plenty but it didn't come out right when I recorded it and it has never been on one of my albums. Something like that could be in there."

In September, Gabriel starts first grade and Miss Baez wants to be home for that. Gabriel spends about half his time with her and half with his father, David Harris. "He explains that his Daddy is younger than me and bigger and smarter, bits of information I can do without.

"It makes me very happy that he is happy in both places. He is doing better than most kids do in split situations. He's in good shape. When he starts chomping on his lower lip, I go into a frenzy which doesn't help anybody. I'm a strong believer in child psychologists.

"Gabe started eating his lip and we both went to a psychologist. It was a third eye coming in on the situation. We were using Gabe in our post-marital fights and he spotted our nonsense. I don't think we've ever done that again."

Miss Baez thinks she doesn't want to remarry. "A year ago I would have said no forever. Somebody might come in and be interesting enough to want to spend part of my life with. I like living alone and I'm very poor at living with somebody. If it should happen again, it's going to take a lot of work and somebody to crash through the barriers to make it fun enough to be worthwhile."

Miss Baez is working on a book of reminiscences of things since her book, "Daybreak." "There's being in Hanoi and having my son. I have lots to say about both those things. I worked on it for a month and a half this spring. I wrote mornings, collapsed afternoons and evenings I had friends over and we'd horse around and I spent time with Gabe. I love that routine. It's very hard to maintain it."

As for politics, Miss Baez says, "Basically, I'm laying low for a while." As for the political and protest song, she says, "The fad is past for now. Who knows what comes in next. 'The Eve of Destruction' was the first time people realized they could make a big bag of money writing protest, not counting Dylan. That is not what I was in it for.

"I went on a United Farm Workers march in Modesto this spring. I walked part of one day and all of the next day, about 10 miles, and I sat down at one time and a girl said to me, 'They say you've sold out and you're not going to be political any more. Is it true?' I said, 'Wait till I rub the blisters on my feet before I answer that.' She didn't get it."

The WEEDERS GUIDE

IRON CHLOROSIS is easy to detect. Photograph of apple leaves shows various stages of iron chlorosis. The area between the leaf veins yellows first. In time, however, the entire leaf can become chlorotic.

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Putting a rusty nail in the soil near a tree won't do anything more to help remedy iron chlorosis — or iron deficiency — than if you suffered from anemia and chewed on bits of iron.

Plants suffer from lack of iron just as your body does. In plants yellowing of leaves is a sign of chlorosis, which can affect trees, shrubs, vines, field crops, flowers and grasses.

If you detect iron chlorosis early you can do something about it. Watch to determine whether leaves lose their chlorophyll, or green coloring, whether plants don't look healthy, or whether they fail to grow.

In leaf plants (deciduous) areas between veins become light green, yellow or white. The more iron deficiency, the paler the area. In serious cases, the edges of leaves, or the entire leaf, turn brown and plants often die. In evergreens, or conifers, needles turn yellow or, worse, brown and plants may die. Sometimes only part of a plant is affected.

Iron chlorosis occurs in susceptible plants when iron is not available, often because of high alkalinity or elements that interfere with absorption of iron. It is more prevalent in arid areas where soils are high in lime. It may also be caused by deficiency of iron or by application of too much lime or phosphate to certain soils. Over-irrigation, poor drainage, bicarbonate in the soil or irrigation water and high levels of manganese, copper and zinc also may be responsible.

A helpful treatment is inserting an iron chelate cartridge via a root feeder and letting water take the solution to the feeding zone under the plant drip branches.

Treat lawns by inserting the root feeder six inches below the soil and saturate with water dissolved solution at 30-inch intervals. The iron chelate remains fixed in the soil until used up and often one application is enough. If not, repeat in 10 days or so.

Among plants most susceptible are roses, citrus and other fruits trees; pin oaks, maples, magnolias, rhododendrons, holly and acid-favoring trees; camelias, azaleas and other plants that like acid.

Restoring iron to deficient plants will restore vigor.

Popcorn Storage

If tiny grayish moths appear in home grown popcorn stored in sealed jars, they are probably Angoumois grain moths. The moths develop in the kernels at the time they were stored in some areas.

New Garden Book

In The Postage Stamp Garden Book (Tarcher-Hawthorn) Duane Newcomb tells you, via friendly, simple words or pictures just how to go about your garden chores. Newcomb recalls happy organic experiences.

There is advice about what goes into the soil and how to get the soil ready; how and when to plant; basic vegetables to raise and plants that like each other.

"My last album that sold anything was my first A and M, 'Come from the Shadows,' and it didn't sell particularly well either. It didn't exactly have a hard-sell cover on it — two old people being arrested. I think the guy in back of the cops is an agent."

In between came LPs "Where Are You Now, My Son?" and "Here's to Life."

Selections for the new album were chosen strictly for musicality, Miss Baez says. "I was very comfortable making a nonpolitical album. In some ways it is very liberating. I'm a musician. I made a music album. Musically, it is one of my best."

Last year, Miss Baez says, "I was almost constantly on concert tours because I was in the process of going broke. I went to Australia, New Zealand, Japan, Latin America, England, France and Italy. If I don't feel pressure, I love going to those places.

"Financially, I wasn't holding things together. It was bad business management. I have spent the last month and a half rearranging all those people and that's hard work, too.

"If I took the suggestion of my new people, if I work very, very hard for one year I'll be okay the rest of my life. I'll settle for working hard two months this year and being all right next year." An intensive tour was set up for July 6 to Aug. 10 and there'll be concerts during October.

"I want to hang out some with my child, Gabriel, who is 5. I want to be around if he needs me, not in Mozambique or somewhere.

"I went two years and did only benefits. Now I can't do any for a while, even for my favorite people. I have to find nice ways of saying no." Then Miss Baez adds that she might make an exception for the United Farm Workers and Amnesty International. Then, when she was in Boston, she did a free Bicentennial concert.

The July tour may produce a live album, Miss Baez says. "We might learn some new stuff plus me singing some of the oldie goldie things from the Vanguard albums might make a nice new direction. I sang 'The Lonesome Death of Hattie Carroll' plenty but it didn't come out right when I recorded it and it has never been on one of my albums. Something like that could be in there."

In September, Gabriel starts first grade and Miss Baez wants to be home for that. Gabriel spends about half his time with her and half with his father, David Harris. "He explains that his Daddy is younger than me and bigger and smarter, bits of information I can do without.

"It makes me very happy that he is happy in both places. He is doing better than most kids do in split situations. He's in good shape. When he starts chomping on his lower lip, I go into a frenzy which doesn't help anybody. I'm a strong believer in child psychologists.

"Gabe started eating his lip and we both went to a psychologist. It was a third eye coming in on the situation. We were using Gabe in our post-marital fights and he spotted our nonsense. I don't think we've ever done that again."

Miss Baez thinks she doesn't want to remarry. "A year ago I would have said no forever. Somebody might come in and be interesting enough to want to spend part of my life with. I like living alone and I'm very poor at living with somebody. If it should happen again, it's going to take a lot of work and somebody to crash through the barriers to make it fun enough to be worthwhile."

Miss Baez is working on a book of reminiscences of things since her book, "Daybreak." "There's being in Hanoi and having my son. I have lots to say about both those things. I worked on it for a month and a half this spring. I wrote mornings, collapsed afternoons and evenings I had friends over and we'd horse around and I spent time with Gabe. I love that routine. It's very hard to maintain it."

As for politics, Miss Baez says, "Basically, I'm laying low for a while." As for the political and protest song, she says, "The fad is past for now. Who knows what comes in next. 'The Eve of Destruction' was the first time people realized they could make a big bag of money writing protest, not counting Dylan. That is not what I was in it for.

"I went on a United Farm Workers march in Modesto this spring. I walked part of one day and all of the next day, about 10 miles, and I sat down at one time and a girl said to me, 'They say you've sold out and you're not going to be political any more. Is it true?' I said, 'Wait till I rub the blisters on my feet before I answer that.' She didn't get it."

The Weeders Guide

IRON CHLOROSIS is easy to detect. Photograph of apple leaves shows various stages of iron chlorosis. The area between the leaf veins yellows first. In time, however, the entire leaf can become chlorotic.

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Putting a rusty nail in the soil near a tree won't do anything more to help remedy iron chlorosis — or iron deficiency — than if you suffered from anemia and chewed on bits of iron.

Plants suffer from lack of iron just as your body does. In plants yellowing of leaves is a sign of chlorosis, which can affect trees, shrubs, vines, field crops, flowers and grasses.

If you detect iron chlorosis early you can do something about it. Watch to determine whether leaves lose their chlorophyll, or green coloring, whether plants don't look healthy, or whether they fail to grow.

In leaf plants (deciduous) areas between veins become light green, yellow or white. The more iron deficiency, the paler the area. In serious cases, the edges of leaves, or the entire leaf, turn brown and plants often die. In evergreens, or conifers, needles turn yellow or, worse, brown and plants may die. Sometimes only part of a plant is affected.

Iron chlorosis occurs in susceptible plants when iron is not available, often because of high alkalinity or elements that interfere with absorption of iron. It is more prevalent in arid areas where soils are high in lime. It may also be caused by deficiency of iron or by application of too much lime or phosphate to certain soils. Over-irrigation, poor drainage, bicarbonate in the soil or irrigation water and high levels of manganese, copper and zinc also may be responsible.

A helpful treatment is inserting an iron chelate cartridge via a root feeder and letting water take the solution to the feeding zone under the plant drip branches.

Treat lawns by inserting the root feeder six inches below the soil and saturate with water dissolved solution at 30-inch intervals. The iron chelate remains fixed in the soil until used up and often one application is enough. If not, repeat in 10 days or so.

Among plants most susceptible are roses, citrus and other fruits trees; pin oaks, maples, magnolias, rhododendrons, holly and acid-favoring trees; camelias, azaleas and other plants that like acid.

Restoring iron to deficient plants will restore vigor.

Popcorn Storage

If tiny grayish moths appear in home grown popcorn stored in sealed jars, they are probably Angoumois grain moths. The moths develop in the kernels at the time they were stored in some areas.

New Garden Book

In The Postage Stamp Garden Book (Tarcher-Hawthorn) Duane Newcomb tells you, via friendly, simple words or pictures just how to go about your garden chores. Newcomb recalls happy organic experiences.

There is advice about what goes into the soil and how to get the soil ready; how and when to plant; basic vegetables to raise and plants that like each other.

Priests testify for parents in 'die with dignity' case

Karen Quinlan

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — Two Roman Catholic priests testified toay that they assured Karen Ann Quinlan's adoptive parents the couple was morally right in desiring to turn off her respirator and "let her die with dignity."

"My understanding of the Catholic position is that extraordinary measures are not morally required to prolong life," said the Rev. Thomas Trapasso, the family's parish priest.

Father Trapasso said Karen's father came to him last summer and told him of Karen's failure to recover from a coma.

"He was still seeking hope and praying for a miracle, and the information I had gotten was that it was more hopeless than hopeful," Father Trapasso said. "I was afraid Joe wasn't facing reality."

The priest said when he suggested to the father that maintaining a respirator was not morally required, Quinlan responded by saying, "This is playing God."

"I said, 'No, we can make decisions and are expected to. We would not be playing God,'" Father Trapasso recalled.

The Rev. Pascale Caccavalle, chaplain at the hospital where the 21-year-old Miss Quinlan has been lying comatose for six months, said he advised the family: "When a patient has reached an irreversible state, then the obligation to use extraordinary means ceases."

Both clergymen said they felt that Miss Quinlan's respirator is an extraordinary means of keeping her alive.

Julia Quinlan was scheduled to testify today on how she decided that her daughter should be allowed to die.

Briefs filed before the trial indicated Mrs. Quinlan will testify that her daughter said weeks before she became ill that if she ever became terminally ill, she wouldn't want to be kept alive by artificial means. The comments were made during a family discussion about two friends who were dying of cancer, according to the Quinlan's attorney, Paul W. Armstrong.

It has not been determined what caused Miss Quinlan's illness, but doctors who first treated her in April suspected she had used tranquilizers and liquor together at a party.

Her father, Joseph, testified before Superior Court Judge Robert Muir Jr. on Tuesday that he believes it is God's will that Karen should be removed from the respirator at St. Clare's Hospital so "nature can take its course. It's the Lord's will; for some reason he wants to take her."

"We had done everything possible to help her and now we had no hope," Quinlan said, recalling his feeling when doctors told him three months ago that his daughter's coma was irreversible.

Quinlan said that if the court grants his request, he will have a doctor remove the respirator as his family and parish priests watch at Miss Quinlan's bedside.

"If the court doesn't agree with me I don't know what I'll do," he said.

Two doctors who have cared for Miss Quinlan testified Monday that they would not disconnect the respirator, even if ordered to do so by the court. They said she is alive by all medical criteria.

The state has argued that it could be considered homicide to disconnect the respirator.

Dr. Julius Korein, a neurologist testifying for the Quinlans, said, "I and many of my colleagues do not believe in saving a life that will lie as a vegetable for 10 years."

The Quinlan's action has been endorsed by priests at their local Roman Catholic church. On Tuesday, the chancellor of the Paterson Diocese endorsed the Quinlans' position.

Bluff down to eighth in MSWSCA poll

The top spots remained unchanged in the Missouri High School Poll released early this week. All four leaders — St. Louis Southwest, Columbia Rock Bridge, St. Louis Country Day and Orrick — are still rated number one in their respective classes. SEMO conference representatives remained listed among the elite. Four-A power Poplar Bluff dropped from third to eighth because of a 9-8 loss to Cape Central. Idle Jackson stayed in the third slot in the class 3-A rankings and East Prairie jumped a notch to seventh by defeating Caruthersville 27-14.

A defensive player, linebacker Mike Rogers of Truman High, was listed as the top 4-A player last week. His defense shut down high-scoring Chrisman 50-12, and he had 16 tackles in the game, seven unassisted. Chrisman came into the game averaging over 30 poins a game. Rogers also contributed the key block on a 57-yard t-d on a punt return, which broke the game open. He kicked three extra-points and punted once.

In 3-A, Boonville quarterback David Steinbrueck tossed a touchdown pass with 26 seconds left to give his team a 24-20 win. Steibruech ended the game with 10 of 17 passes complete for 116 yards and two scores. He also ran for 71 yards on 11 carries.

East Newton's Randy Frenckern rushed 19 times for 148 yards and touchdowns of 55, 25 and three yards. On defense Frencken had 16 tackles, seven unassisted.

Appleton City's David Johnson was the 2-A player of the week. He ran 32 times for 309 yards and both scores in a 14-6 win.

Sixth series game worth waiting for BOSTON (AP) — After three days of rain, they finally played baseball at Fenway Park. And, boy, was it worth waiting for.

With all the drama of Broadway and the wallop of a Hollywood ending, the Boston Red Sox defeated the Cincinnati Reds 7-6 in 12 tension-packed innings Tuesday night and set the stage for tonight's seventh World Series game.

"They will be talking about that game for years to come," said Cincinnati's Pete Rose after the Red Sox tied this incredible World Series at three games apiece. "This game was the best advertisement for baseball you could have."

"When he came up to bat in the 10th, Rose leaned over and said to me, 'Wow, this is some kind of game,'" said Boston catcher Carlton Fisk. "I agreed with him. You couldn't ask for a better game."

Fisk ended the wild affair as it should have been ended — with a leadoff home run in the 12th. The ball jumped off Fisk's bat and sailed into the left-field foul pole, bringing the roaring crowd at Fenway to its feet and the Red Sox players streaming onto the soggy field.

"It was a sinker down and in," said Fisk of the home run pitch from Cincinnati reliever Pat Darcy, the eighth Reds' pitcher of the game. "I knew the ball was either going to go foul or be a home run. Since the wind was blowing out, I was afraid the ball might hook around the pole. In fact, I bet the wind took the thing about 15 feet closer to the line than it should have been and it wound up hitting the pole just before going around it."

Fisk's blow was the most dramatic of the night because it was the final shot fired at Fenway. But there were many other moments of gorgeous high tension that kept everyone stuck to their seats and television sets.

Washed out of three straight starts by a long-winded storm, the Reds at last were poised for a knockout punch of the Red Sox in game No. 6. But it was Boston that got in the first punches, scoring three quick runs on Fred Lynn's homer into the right-center field seats in the first inning.

It seemed that it would be enough for Luis Tiant, the way Boston's ace was pitching for the first four innings. He gave up no runs and only two hits and appeared to be well on his way toward a third victory in the crazy, mixed-up series.

It wasn't to be, however. Tiant showed he was only human in the fifth when he gave up three runs, two on a triple by Ken Griffey. His imperfection became more obvious when George Foster unloaded a two-run double in the Cincinnati seventh and Cesar Geronimo laced a home run into the rightfield seats in the eighth.

Geronimo's wallop finished Tiant and gave the Reds a 6-3 lead. With Pedro Borbon pitching overpowering baseball in relief, the Big Red Machine seemed to be driving toward its first World Series title since 1940.

Borbon gave up a leadoff single to Lynn and a walk to Rico Petrocellli. The reliever was taken out of the game in favor of Rawly Eastwick and the Fenway crowd of 35,205 buzzed.

Cincinnati's outstanding youngster quieted the Boston customers by striking out Dwight Evans and getting Rick Burleson on a fly ball. Then he went to a 2-2 count on pinch hitter Bernie Carbo before the former Cincinnati player blasted a game-tying homer into the center field stands, more than 400 feet away.

"It was a fastball over the plate," Carbo said of the key pitch from Eastwick. "I was just trying to make contact in that spot and not strike out, so I stepped out of the box a couple of times to help relax myself. All I was trying to do was just put the ball in play someplace."

The house came down when Carbo hit it out. And the benchwarmer had a ball running around the bases, applauding himself as he enjoyed every second of his journey toward home.

With the ardent cheers of the Red Sox faithful still ringing in the air, the Boston bunch came back with more fireworks in the ninth. They loaded the bases with none out. The noise level reached new heights.

"We thought for sure we should have won it then," said Fisk.

But Boston didn't. Lynn lofted a fly ball to Foster along the left field line and the Cincinnati outfielder gunned down Denny Doyle at home for a double play. Then Petrocelli grounded out and the game went into extra innings.

The Reds had the opportunity to put the Red Sox away but were turned back by an almost unbelievable play by Evans in right in the 11th. With a man on first, Joe Morgan hit a shot that appeared almost certainly headed for home run territory, but the graceful young outfielder speared the ball near the seats and fired back into the infield to complete a double play.

"It was the best catch I've ever seen," said Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson.

That catch saved Boston for the 12th, when Fisk delivered his sudden thunder. The broadshouldered catcher leaped in the air when the ball hit the pole, and he joyfully streaked around the bases. When he finished his rounds, there was a mob of fans as well as teammates to welcome him home.

Frosh blank Caruthersville

Sikeston's freshmen bounced back from a defeat at the hands of Poplar Bluff to blank Caruthersville 16-0 at Public Schools Stadium Tuesday night. The win boosted the Bulldog frosh record to 4-2.

The two teams battled to a scoreless tie in the first half, but two scores by Scott Wall gave Sikeston the win. Wall's first score came from three yards out in the third quarter. Scott Heeb added the two-point conversion to give Sikeston an eight-point lead.

Wall's second score came in the fourth period from 65 yards out. Jay Cox added the two-point conversion.

New freshman game will be a week from Thursday, when the eighth and ninth graders travel to Charleston for a doubleheader.

The Bulldog junior varsity won Monday night, 12-0, at Caruthersville.

The team won a rough defensive battle against the Tigers, then, had to withstand an assault from Caruthersville fans, as a brick was thrown through a school bus window when the team was leaving.

Chris Mathews threw a 70-yard touchdown pass for the first Bulldog score. Then, Glynn Felton scored in his third straight game to complete the Sikeston scoring.

The junior varsity has a record of 4-1-2.

SHS volleyballers beat Charleston

The Sikeston Bulldog volleyball team rebounded from a heartbreaking loss to Dexter Monday night to smash Charleston in two games last night at the SHS fieldhouse.

Sikeston continued the fine play they had shown the night before in their near-upset of Dexter in the first game, winning 15-5. Coach Jane Merrick sent in her reserves in the second contest, but the subs fell behind 9-0. Starter Susan McLaughlin came off the bench to spark a Bulldog rally that yielded eleven points, including seven on her own serve. Sikeston went on to win the second game 15-13.

The Bulldog B team picked up their second victory of the season, defeated the Bluejays 15-12 and 15-11.

The match was the final regular season outing for the team, which moved its record to 3-7. The district tournament starts next Monday night at Richland, and CoachMerrick said that if the team continues to improve and plays like they are capable of playing, "we might surprise a team or two."

Netters run mark to 7-2-1

The Sikeston girls' tennis team belted Poplar Bluff 9-3 Tuesday afternoon in the next-to-last match of the season. The team's record is 7-2-1 with the final match Wednesday afternoon against Caruthersville.

Bluff down to eighth in MSWSCA poll

The top spots remained unchanged in the Missouri High School Poll released early this week. All four leaders — St. Louis Southwest, Columbia Rock Bridge, St. Louis Country Day and Orrick — are still rated number one in their respective classes. SEMO conference representatives remained listed among the elite. Four-A power Poplar Bluff dropped from third to eighth because of a 9-8 loss to Cape Central. Idle Jackson stayed in the third slot in the class 3-A rankings and East Prairie jumped a notch to seventh by defeating Caruthersville 27-14.

A defensive player, linebacker Mike Rogers of Truman High, was listed as the top 4-A player last week. His defense shut down high-scoring Chrisman 50-12, and he had 16 tackles in the game, seven unassisted. Chrisman came into the game averaging over 30 poins a game. Rogers also contributed the key block on a 57-yard t-d on a punt return, which broke the game open. He kicked three extra-points and punted once.

In 3-A, Boonville quarterback David Steinbrueck tossed a touchdown pass with 26 seconds left to give his team a 24-20 win. Steibruech ended the game with 10 of 17 passes complete for 116 yards and two scores. He also ran for 71 yards on 11 carries.

East Newton's Randy Frenckern rushed 19 times for 148 yards and touchdowns of 55, 25 and three yards. On defense Frencken had 16 tackles, seven unassisted.

Appleton City's David Johnson was the 2-A player of the week. He ran 32 times for 309 yards and both scores in a 14-6 win.

Frosh blank Caruthersville

Sikeston's freshmen bounced back from a defeat at the hands of Poplar Bluff to blank Caruthersville 16-0 at Public Schools Stadium Tuesday night. The win boosted the Bulldog frosh record to 4-2.

The two teams battled to a scoreless tie in the first half, but two scores by Scott Wall gave Sikeston the win. Wall's first score came from three yards out in the third quarter. Scott Heeb added the two-point conversion to give Sikeston an eight-point lead.

Wall's second score came in the fourth period from 65 yards out. Jay Cox added the two-point conversion.

New freshman game will be a week from Thursday, when the eighth and ninth graders travel to Charleston for a doubleheader.

The Bulldog junior varsity won Monday night, 12-0, at Caruthersville.

The team won a rough defensive battle against the Tigers, then, had to withstand an assault from Caruthersville fans, as a brick was thrown through a school bus window when the team was leaving.

Chris Mathews threw a 70-yard touchdown pass for the first Bulldog score. Then, Glynn Felton scored in his third straight game to complete the Sikeston scoring.

The junior varsity has a record of 4-1-2.

SHS volleyballers beat Charleston

The Sikeston Bulldog volleyball team rebounded from a heartbreaking loss to Dexter Monday night to smash Charleston in two games last night at the SHS fieldhouse.

Sikeston continued the fine play they had shown the night before in their near-upset of Dexter in the first game, winning 15-5. Coach Jane Merrick sent in her reserves in the second contest, but the subs fell behind 9-0. Starter Susan McLaughlin came off the bench to spark a Bulldog rally that yielded eleven points, including seven on her own serve. Sikeston went on to win the second game 15-13.

The Bulldog B team picked up their second victory of the season, defeated the Bluejays 15-12 and 15-11.

The match was the final regular season outing for the team, which moved its record to 3-7. The district tournament starts next Monday night at Richland, and CoachMerrick said that if the team continues to improve and plays like they are capable of playing, "we might surprise a team or two."

Netters run mark to 7-2-1

The Sikeston girls' tennis team belted Poplar Bluff 9-3 Tuesday afternoon in the next-to-last match of the season. The team's record is 7-2-1 with the final match Wednesday afternoon against Caruthersville.

When Sikeston goes against Cape Girardeau this Thursday night they will be going against a team which fought Jackson practically to a standstill and which beat Poplar Bluff. And what's more important they will be playing against a team which has manhandled Sikeston for seven straight years.

It's no secret, beating Cape would be the sweetest victory a Sikeston team has enjoyed in years. Not one of this year's Young Gladiators has ever beaten a Cape team. And for the first time in a long time a Sikeston win is a distinct possibility.

Sikeston is enjoying a good season. Two of the victories in particular are important. The win over Charleston showed that Sikeston could play well, and the win over Wentzville showed that Sikeston could play tough. In order to beat Cape, Sikeston will have to play well, and they'll have to play tough.

Cape is bound to be high for this game. They received a large, emotional shot in the arm when they whipped Poplar Bluff. And don't take anything away from the Tigers. They whipped Bluff, emotionally, physically, and on the scoreboard.

Now, for the first time in many years, Sikeston will field a team which will be the match for Cape. In actual fact, Sikeston will probably go into the game favored to win.

I agree with those who pick Sikeston to win. All things being equal, I think Sikeston has the superior team. But in the game of football things are never equal. The inequities are the intangibles ... the emotional posture of the players as individuals, and the team as a whole.

Therefore it is vitally important that Sikeston walks the fine line of balance between the confidence which is an absolute necessity, and over-confidence which would be totally devestating. Cape has many reasons to be up for this game, and Sikeston can't afford to give them an inch.

But Sikeston has an even greater incentive. A victory would guarantee a winning season for the Bulldogs ... but a mere winning season was put on the shelves long ago. Sikeston is now in a position to go for all the marbles to walk away with the championship of the Northern Division tucked away. And Sikeston can do it. It has the talent, the coaching, the fan support and the overall enthusiasm to do it, and do it all. There is one thing in Sikeston's advantage now. We have the power to do it for ourselves. We don't have to pull for a victory of one team over another ... all we have to do is go out and win.

And we can begin with Cape.

Today is somewhat of a sad day for me!

You see it's the last day as Sports Editor of The Daily Standard for this scribe, who hopefully will begin a new career as an editor of an Ozark Foothills weekly.

I feel like I'm leaving home for the first time in my life. After spending almost 10 years (it would have been 10 if I'd been around Dec. 16) with the Blanton's and The Standard it seems like home.

The biggest regret I have about leaving is not being able to be part of another basketball season as the past one. But there's one bright spot....and that's being associated with the Bulldogs rise to respectability on the gridiron. Good Luck Dogs!

But, who knows, I may return one of these days!

I can truthfully say that my job has been easier over the past few seasons. That has come about due mostly to the fine assistants I've had and the excellent cooperation that the coaches have given. For all this I am thankful.

But I can't end this column without giving my fellow office colleagues a pat on the back for putting up with me. I know it has been hard at times. It has been more than a pleasure working with all of you!

For the girls in the back shop....well you know I'll miss all of you. Especially knowing how all of you have made a special effort to assist me.

I'm really grateful for the opportunity afforded me here at The Daily Standard. It's not every day that a country boy from Parma goes into a newspaper office and applies for a sports job without any formal training and gets the job. This was an honor.

You readers stay behind your favorite team as you've did in the past and help Southeast Missouri maintain its....SEMO POWER.

It's hard to put into words about how you feel, but I hope all of you know!

Good bye friends.

Eight-year old Scott Carmody of Sikeston proudly displays the two first place trophies he won at the local and zone Punt, Pass and Kick competitions in Sikeston and Cape recently. Scott participated in the area competition last Saturday at St. Louis but did not win a trophy. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Carmody of 140 Autumn Drive.

MORE ABOUT PRICE. Price quotations are base sticker prices excluding title, taxes and destination charges. Actual prices and comparisons will vary by dealer.

MORE ABOUT MILEAGE. Since these are EPA estimates, your actual mileage will vary depending on your car's condition and optional equipment and how and where you drive. California ratings lower.

More car for the money.
For about the same money as the 2-passenger Scooter, you get more car in the Pinto Pony MPG. It has 4-passenger room a bigger 2.3 liter engine, 627 pounds more road-hugging weight. Yet Pinto Pony MPG still has EPA estimates of 38 mpg highway, 25 city. See box above for details.

Sticker priced less than the 2-passenger Chevette Scooter, $203 less than the 4-passenger base Chevette.
While the 2-passenger Chevette Scooter has a low price, don't expect carpeting (it has rubber floor mats), upholstered interior door panels (fiberboard), chrome bumpers and hubcaps (painted), and many other interior convenience features. Don't even expect a back seat (the base Scooter doesn't even have one).

For a little less money than the Scooter, you can drive a Pinto Pony MPG that includes a lot of things the Scooter leaves out.

Pinto Pony MPG's road-hugging weight, wide stance, big engine, high EPA ratings and low price all add up to outstanding value.

Firearms misuse concerns task force

JEFFERSON CITY — The Community Crime Prevention Task Force of the Missouri Action Plan for Public Safety has formulated preliminary recommendations for Missouri's criminal justice system, including ones that would require registration of all handguns and attach a mandatory five-year sentence for felonies involving the use or possession of a firearm.

The task force presented its preliminary recommendations in the form of goals, standards and action plans following a series of meetings that began in late July.

Task force advisor Nancy Eisenstein of the Missouri Action Plan for Public Safety said that the task force approached the crime problem from the standpoint of the community and its citizens in recognition of the fact that this is where crime prevention must begin.

"There was much debate," she said, "particularly on the handgun proposal. The task force recognized that handgun registration wouldn't reduce the crime rate appreciably, but it was felt that registration would make the investigation easier after the crime has been committed."

The task force addressed three broad areas in community crime prevention, as expressed in the goal statements agreed upon by the task force: 1. To reduce the recidivism rate of offenders in Missouri; 2. To reduct the opportunity for criminal activity; and 3. To detect early those children in the community who exhibit behavioral problems and introduce these children and their families to community resources for assistance.

To reduce the rate of recidivism, the task force recommended the repeal of statutes that exclude prior offenders from certain jobs, the establishment of community-based groups to work with manpower agencies to develop employment opportunities for ex-offenders and the initiation of community volunteer programs to help ex-offencers make the readjustment back into society.

To help reduce the opportunity for criminal activity, task force members recommended the establishment of public relations and community service functions in all police departments and the establishment of an Institute of Crime Prevention by the Missouri Department of Public Safety.

The institute would train representatives from local law enforcement agencies to establish and maintain community crime prevention programs.

The third goal, the early detection of children in the community who exhibit behavioral problems, resulted in action plans that would put the Missouri Division of Youth Services in contact with concerned citizens who desire to establish community groups to identify and work with such children.

Mrs. Eisenstein noted that this task force was specifically addressing the problem of crime prevention, and sought to identify activity that could be taken before the fact, that is, before the crime is committed.

She said, "The police can't do the job alone.They need the full cooperation of every citizen, and to date they haven't really had that. Crime prevention begins at home. Once the criminal justice system gets into the act, it's too late."

Public hearings, beginning in late October, will give citizens the opportunity to comment on task force recommendations in the following areas: police, courts, adult corrections, juvenile delinquency, criminal justice information systems and community crime prevention.

MAPPS is funded by a grant from the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and is coordinated by the Missouri Department of Public Safety.

Vietnam vets don't die, they rot away

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — While speaking to marine veterans of Guadalcanal during World War II, Eleanor Roosevelt was pelted with coins from an audience not really in the mood for platitudes or deference. Afterwards, the shaken Mrs. Roosevelt wondered aloud whether men subjected so long to war should not — even as the combat K-9's — be given some kind of training to help them readjust to the idea of nonviolent behavior.

The idea, lofty and altogether too idealistic, was rejected. Too bad. We are still learning of soldiers who, without aid, are sometimes tragically unable to readjust to peace. Today we call it the post-Vietnam Syndrome, and the jails, mental wards, bars and unemployment lines are peopled by our "boys" who can't cope.

William McFarland Jr. is one of them. His case has come to the attention of Dr. William Corson, a former marine colonel now coordinating a Vietnam veterans study program for Penthouse magazine. Forget the Penthouse reputation; Corson's program is a sober, if lonely, contribution to a vital matter. And McFarland is a ripe example of the screaming need for some light on the subject.

This then is Bill McFarland's story. It is not uplifting reading.

In 1965, the day after he learned of the death of a friend in Vietnam, McFarland, then 17 years old, enlisted in the army. He went to infantry school, airborne school, canine school, jungle advanced training and did graduate work in hand-to-hand combat.

He learned to kill in a variety of specialized ways.

When he turned 18, in 1966, he was sent to the First Infantry Division in Vietnam, then one of the most action-prone units in the war. The first dead man he saw was an American mutilated by the Viet Cong, "with his genitals sewn in his mouth." After that the sight of the dead became routine.

His sergeant died. His best pal was blown away. McFarland began smoking grass, boozing rotgut, and sniffing dope. Eventually he too was hit, in the legs, and after several months, six medals, and permanent disabilities, was sent home.

The absence of war, however, did not bring peace to McFarland. He claims the pain-killing agents given him while hospitalized were addicting. Also, he could not forget Vietnam (among those he killed, he says, were young children). He suffered blackouts, nightmares; he tried to kill himself. Six months after his discharge the veteran, just 19 years old, was judicially declared mentally incompetent.

A few years later, McFarland got into a squabble with a man on a California street. The man was killed. Bill McFarland was found guilty, given a sentence of five years to life and sent to prison.

Where he still is today.

Should he be? Decidedly not. Without passing distant judgment on the crime for which he was jailed, the case seems at least to be unfinished business. McFarland claims he was not competent to take part in his trial and did not assist his public defender. It was only after his guilt was established, as example, that McFarland, under clinical drugs, revealed his side of the story: That the victim had started the fight by pulling a gun, that McFarland went into a blind rage and that self-defense and mental instability were direct factors.

Beyond this there are professional opinions that, crime or no crime, McFarland is an emotional cripple, more in need of hospital than penal confinement. Dr. Bill Barkley, a staff psychologist for the California Department of Corrections, says flatly that clinical examinations of McFarland indicate: "His crime of murder is directly related to the fact he was a trained killer and also a heavy drug user." Barkley suggests, and logic agrees, the veteran be paroled to a Veterans Administration hospital where he can receive long needed care.

To be sure, McFarland has asked for the parole, but to no good end. Letters to federal and state authorities, including a governor and President, have resulted only in regrets. Meanwhile, this sad former soldier wastes away. Post-Vietnam Syndrome? It's more like a Post-Vietnam trap; everybody got him in, but nobody lets him out.

Firearms misuse concerns task force

JEFFERSON CITY — The Community Crime Prevention Task Force of the Missouri Action Plan for Public Safety has formulated preliminary recommendations for Missouri's criminal justice system, including ones that would require registration of all handguns and attach a mandatory five-year sentence for felonies involving the use or possession of a firearm.

The task force presented its preliminary recommendations in the form of goals, standards and action plans following a series of meetings that began in late July.

Task force advisor Nancy Eisenstein of the Missouri Action Plan for Public Safety said that the task force approached the crime problem from the standpoint of the community and its citizens in recognition of the fact that this is where crime prevention must begin.

"There was much debate," she said, "particularly on the handgun proposal. The task force recognized that handgun registration wouldn't reduce the crime rate appreciably, but it was felt that registration would make the investigation easier after the crime has been committed."

The task force addressed three broad areas in community crime prevention, as expressed in the goal statements agreed upon by the task force: 1. To reduce the recidivism rate of offenders in Missouri; 2. To reduct the opportunity for criminal activity; and 3. To detect early those children in the community who exhibit behavioral problems and introduce these children and their families to community resources for assistance.

To reduce the rate of recidivism, the task force recommended the repeal of statutes that exclude prior offenders from certain jobs, the establishment of community-based groups to work with manpower agencies to develop employment opportunities for ex-offenders and the initiation of community volunteer programs to help ex-offencers make the readjustment back into society.

To help reduce the opportunity for criminal activity, task force members recommended the establishment of public relations and community service functions in all police departments and the establishment of an Institute of Crime Prevention by the Missouri Department of Public Safety.

The institute would train representatives from local law enforcement agencies to establish and maintain community crime prevention programs.

The third goal, the early detection of children in the community who exhibit behavioral problems, resulted in action plans that would put the Missouri Division of Youth Services in contact with concerned citizens who desire to establish community groups to identify and work with such children.

Mrs. Eisenstein noted that this task force was specifically addressing the problem of crime prevention, and sought to identify activity that could be taken before the fact, that is, before the crime is committed.

She said, "The police can't do the job alone.They need the full cooperation of every citizen, and to date they haven't really had that. Crime prevention begins at home. Once the criminal justice system gets into the act, it's too late."

Public hearings, beginning in late October, will give citizens the opportunity to comment on task force recommendations in the following areas: police, courts, adult corrections, juvenile delinquency, criminal justice information systems and community crime prevention.

MAPPS is funded by a grant from the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and is coordinated by the Missouri Department of Public Safety.

Vietnam vets don't die, they rot away

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — While speaking to marine veterans of Guadalcanal during World War II, Eleanor Roosevelt was pelted with coins from an audience not really in the mood for platitudes or deference. Afterwards, the shaken Mrs. Roosevelt wondered aloud whether men subjected so long to war should not — even as the combat K-9's — be given some kind of training to help them readjust to the idea of nonviolent behavior.

The idea, lofty and altogether too idealistic, was rejected. Too bad. We are still learning of soldiers who, without aid, are sometimes tragically unable to readjust to peace. Today we call it the post-Vietnam Syndrome, and the jails, mental wards, bars and unemployment lines are peopled by our "boys" who can't cope.

William McFarland Jr. is one of them. His case has come to the attention of Dr. William Corson, a former marine colonel now coordinating a Vietnam veterans study program for Penthouse magazine. Forget the Penthouse reputation; Corson's program is a sober, if lonely, contribution to a vital matter. And McFarland is a ripe example of the screaming need for some light on the subject.

This then is Bill McFarland's story. It is not uplifting reading.

In 1965, the day after he learned of the death of a friend in Vietnam, McFarland, then 17 years old, enlisted in the army. He went to infantry school, airborne school, canine school, jungle advanced training and did graduate work in hand-to-hand combat.

He learned to kill in a variety of specialized ways.

When he turned 18, in 1966, he was sent to the First Infantry Division in Vietnam, then one of the most action-prone units in the war. The first dead man he saw was an American mutilated by the Viet Cong, "with his genitals sewn in his mouth." After that the sight of the dead became routine.

His sergeant died. His best pal was blown away. McFarland began smoking grass, boozing rotgut, and sniffing dope. Eventually he too was hit, in the legs, and after several months, six medals, and permanent disabilities, was sent home.

The absence of war, however, did not bring peace to McFarland. He claims the pain-killing agents given him while hospitalized were addicting. Also, he could not forget Vietnam (among those he killed, he says, were young children). He suffered blackouts, nightmares; he tried to kill himself. Six months after his discharge the veteran, just 19 years old, was judicially declared mentally incompetent.

A few years later, McFarland got into a squabble with a man on a California street. The man was killed. Bill McFarland was found guilty, given a sentence of five years to life and sent to prison.

Where he still is today.

Should he be? Decidedly not. Without passing distant judgment on the crime for which he was jailed, the case seems at least to be unfinished business. McFarland claims he was not competent to take part in his trial and did not assist his public defender. It was only after his guilt was established, as example, that McFarland, under clinical drugs, revealed his side of the story: That the victim had started the fight by pulling a gun, that McFarland went into a blind rage and that self-defense and mental instability were direct factors.

Beyond this there are professional opinions that, crime or no crime, McFarland is an emotional cripple, more in need of hospital than penal confinement. Dr. Bill Barkley, a staff psychologist for the California Department of Corrections, says flatly that clinical examinations of McFarland indicate: "His crime of murder is directly related to the fact he was a trained killer and also a heavy drug user." Barkley suggests, and logic agrees, the veteran be paroled to a Veterans Administration hospital where he can receive long needed care.

To be sure, McFarland has asked for the parole, but to no good end. Letters to federal and state authorities, including a governor and President, have resulted only in regrets. Meanwhile, this sad former soldier wastes away. Post-Vietnam Syndrome? It's more like a Post-Vietnam trap; everybody got him in, but nobody lets him out.

Jews, Catholics now outclass in wealth, education

NEW YORK (AP) — Jews and Roman Catholics, many of whose ancestors arrived in this country long after the nation's predominantly Protestant first settlers, now outclass Protestants in wealth and education, a new study reported Saturday.

The analysis, made by the National Opinion Research Center in Chicago, says that Jews and Irish Catholics are the wealthiest religious ethnic group in American society, and also have the most years of education.

In those respects, they are "more successful than the American Protestants which constitute the host culture," the report said.

The study, made for the Ford Foundation, was carried out by a research team headed by the Rev. Andrew Greeley, a Catholic priest. Findings were based on a "composite sample" of 18,000 Americans put together from 12 representative national surveys.

The objective was to determine to what extent immigrant groups that have come to the United States since the Revolutionary War have been able to succeed educationally and economically through opportunities provided in American society as it marks its 200th anniversary.

The study found the average annual income for Jews is $13,340; for Irish Catholics, $12,426; for Italian Catholics, $11,748; German Catholics, $11,632; Polish Catholics, $11,298. Next, in sixth place, are the highest income Protestant group, Episcopalians, averaging $11,032.

The poorest white Americans are Baptists, averaging $8,803, and Irish Protestants, at $9,147 a year. Neither the Episcopalians nor Baptists improve their relative position when rural southern areas are excluded from the analysis.

In metropolitan areas of the north, Jews average $12,988 annually, Irish Catholics, $12,863, while Methodists, Episcopalians and Presbyterian families all average less than the Polish Catholic average of $11,435.

Father Greeley noted that Irish Catholics were financially more successful than previously thought, but he said, "Financial success is no longer considered a good thing by many Americans."

"It used to be said of the ethnics that they were no good because they could not achieve educationally or economically," he added. "Now it will be said they are no good because they have achieved educationally and economically."

The report said Jews and Catholics also dominate the educational scene with Jews averaging 14 years of education and Irish Catholics 12.5 years, while Polish and Italian Catholics have exactly the national white average, 11.1 years.

Despite the educational and financial achievement of Catholics, however, the report said there is some evidence they are underrepresented at the highest levels of professional, business and academic life. The disparity is even greater for Italian Catholics, the report added.

The report said this raises the possibility of discrimination "at the upper echelons of the occupational strata, subtle and perhaps not all that harmful among the Irish, but rather blatant against southern and eastern European Catholics."

Non-whites and Spanish-speaking groups were not included in the study.

New argument for speeders use

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — Paul VanderMaat, in front of a judge to answer a speeding ticket, argued that the ionized air that precedes a thunderstorm affects a speed radar unit.

A thunderstorm struck in the area after he was accused of traveling 33 miles per hour in a 25 m.p.h. zone.

Judge Raymond E. Hunter, a physicist who also serves part-time as a Municipal Court judge, said the argument made sense, likening it to static on the radio and saying static electricity in the air could bend the otherwise straight radar beam and result in a false reading.

"Only in Los Alamos could a defendant use a principle of advanced physics in his defense and have a judge understand what he's saying," Hunter said in Thursday night's court session. He found VanderMaat innocent.

Both are theoretical physicists at Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory.

New argument for speeders use

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — Paul VanderMaat, in front of a judge to answer a speeding ticket, argued that the ionized air that precedes a thunderstorm affects a speed radar unit.

A thunderstorm struck in the area after he was accused of traveling 33 miles per hour in a 25 m.p.h. zone.

Judge Raymond E. Hunter, a physicist who also serves part-time as a Municipal Court judge, said the argument made sense, likening it to static on the radio and saying static electricity in the air could bend the otherwise straight radar beam and result in a false reading.

"Only in Los Alamos could a defendant use a principle of advanced physics in his defense and have a judge understand what he's saying," Hunter said in Thursday night's court session. He found VanderMaat innocent.

Both are theoretical physicists at Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory.

Advertising brings startling results

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Last Wednesday night 15 venturesome girls called Norman Spielberg.

The next morning he got letters from four more.

Spielberg himself admits he was a bit startled.

An investment banker three years divorced, he met with sudden success after growing weary of singles clubs and singles bars.

"Investment banker desires to meet attractive, personable girl in 20s or early 30s for dating and possible marriage," read the advertisement he ran in several area papers.

"I'm 5 ft. 10, 165 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes."

The add concluded with Spielberg's telephone number and address,

"I walked in the door about 6:30 p.m. Wednesday and the phone was ringing when I walked in and it rang until about 12:15 in the morning," the New York native said.

Spielberg, in his late 30s, said he got the idea from a news story about a man who bought a newspaper ad to advertise for a wife.

By Friday he had two dates and was making plans to get in touch with several other women he talked to on the phone.

He said he got one crank call which was quickly disposed of.

Spielberg said he expects another 25 calls this weekend and is looking forward to more letters.

Spielberg says the woman he's looking for must enjoy her job if she is employed, look good in jeans or a dress and be able to cook a little.

"I'd have to say I live on hope," he said, "If I don't find a wife I think I'm going to find a girl that I like to take out, that I'm really going to like going with.

What's the law?

The case of the slighted corpse

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Genial George drank to other people's health so often that he ruined his own. So much so, in fact, that his body was practically preserved before he died. Consequently, when he died, the medical institution to which he had willed his body for medical research didn't want it.

To salve the slight to her husband's corpse, George's widow decided to toss her erstwhile husband the biggest and fanciest funeral anyone had ever seen.

"You can't do that," protested the executor of Georgte's estate. "While I understand how you feel about wanting to make amends for the slur to George's body, George's will specifically states that he didn't want a funeral. Therefore, I can't allow it."

"You may be his executor," responded the widow, "but I was his wife and I say there's going to be a funeral. George is entitled to regain his dignity. And, as his wife, my wishes must prevail under the circumstances."

The dispute ended up in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit George's widow to undo the slight to her husband's corpse by giving him a funeral?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that, as a general rule, the wishes of a person with regard to the disposition of his body is respected and followed. But in this case, concluded the judge, since the medical institution had rejected George's body, it would be neither improper nor unreasonable to permit George's widow to have the next say as to the disposition of her husband's remains.

Dr. Lamb

Pancreas damage and diabetes

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been a diabetic for about five years. The cause of my condition is an infection of the pancreas at one time. This weakened it to a point where it doesn't function. Will you please let me know what effects this would have and what harm it will do to one's body? Can it cause gangrene? Why doesn't the doctor remove it?

DEAR READER — Diabetes is commonly associated with abnormal function of the islets of Langerhans, the tiny islands of specialized tissue inside the pancreas. It is true that an inflammation of the pancreas may lead to damage of these small islets and cause diabetes. Recently it has been observed that there is a close correlation between diabetes in childhood and mumps. The mumps may involve the pancreas in the same way they involve the salivary glands at the angle of the jaw.

The pancreas has a lot of other functions, and the rest of it may be doing very well, even if the islets are damaged. You need the enzymes formed by the rest of the pancreas for normal digestion. There is no reason at all to remove the pancreas and a good many reasons not to if you want to stay healthy. Even a weakened pancreas that still provides needed enzymes is better than none at all, independent of whether insulin is formed in sufficient quantities by the islets within it.

There are innumerable complications of diabetes, including gangrene if the circulation is involved. The best way to avoid these is by following good management under a doctor's supervision. That usually means a good dietary program and may or may not mean that you will also have to take insulin. The range of possibilities are so great that you have to adjust the management to the individual situation.

Those who want more information on diabetes can write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Send 50 cents, a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope, and ask for The Health Letter number 3-11, Diabetes; Diagnosis, Prevention and Management.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently my sister-in-law died of a heart attack. She was only 27 years old. A doctor and a nurse both asked if she was on birth control pills. She was. I thought they were safe. Why would they ask this?

DEAR READER — At the time of your sister's death there was no hard evidence that birth control pills were associated with heart attacks. The doctor and nurse probably asked the question because of the repeated association of birth control pills with blood clot formation.

Since then a British report by the same group who first stirred up a hornet's nest over clots causing strokes have reported an increased incidence of heart attacks in women using the pill. Women over 40 are said to be 4.7 times as likely to have a heart attack if they take the pill compared to those who don't. In the 30 to 39 year age group the rate is 2.8 times that in non-pill users.

Keep in mind that the incidence of heart attacks in women below 40 is relatively rare and below 30 almost nonexistant. Even 10 times a zero incidence isn't very important.

New Madrid fund drive this week

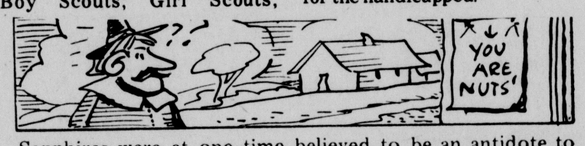
NEW MADRID--The annual Community Fund drive, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Grace Harris, will get under way this week.

Mrs. Harris said a goal of $5,000 has been set for funds to aid eight agencies.

The campaign will involve about 20 workers in a citywide canvass, which is scheduled to be completed by Nov. 22.

Donors will not be asked for specific amounts but are reminded that the one contribution will be shared by each of the eight service or charitable organizations.

Participating agencies include New Madrid Youth Fund, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, American Red Cross, Braille Foundation, Arthritis Foundation, Salvation Army and Community Sheltered Workshop in Sikeston for transportation for the handicapped.



Sapphires were at one time believed to be an antidote to madness.

Indian bound to be a loser in the revolution

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Indian ruled much of colonial America, and the colonists and the British Crown vied for their alliance. "Lose no time," Lord Dartmouth told an emmissary, "in taking such steps as may induce them to take up the hatchet against His Majesty's rebellion subjects ..."

By DENNIS MONTGOMERY
Associated Press Writer

No matter which side the Indian chose he was bound to be a loser in the American revolutionary war.

Both sides coveted his land, and both needed if not his help, then at least safety from his attack.

So it was that Lord Dartmouth urged the Iroquois to take up the hatchet against the colonists and Ethan Allen beseeched the same Indians to "come and help me fight the King's regular troops."

In the east, many tribes like the Stockbridge who joined the Minuteman against the British in the seige of Boston, considered themselves only tenants of the land.

But to the west, to the AXLLEG-henies and beyond, in a long arc from Maine to Florida, the Indian considered himself landlord. To be true, many tribes had accepted King George's protection, but they nevertheless were sovereign.

King George protected them mainly from the insatiable American lust for more land. The foremost Indian complaint was the colonial jumping of tribal claims.

The colonials both ignored and despised the line the King drew along the crest of the mountains in 1763, affirmed by Parliament in 1774, limiting western expansion. And to add insult to injury, they refused being taxed to support the redcoats who enforced the edict.

Initially the Indians tried to stay out of the fight.

Prof. Francis Jennings in a soon-to-be published book, "The Invasion of America," explains that to the Indians the new war looked like the old one, the French and Indian War. He recites the remark of a Dela-ware, "The English say this is all their land. The French say this is all their land. Where is the Indian's land?"

The British had the edge, however — a familiar bureaucracy in the wilderness lands and an adequate supply of trade goods, including guns and bullets, on which the Indian had become dependent.

American traders enjoyed a deservedly poor reputation among their customers. In the early 1760s one observer described them as "a shame to humanity, and the Disgrace of Christianity ... The Savages daily saw themselves cheated in Weight and Measure; their Women debauched, and their young Men corrupted."

"The reason the Indians chose the Crown's side was that they didn't want all those damn settlers spiling over the line," Jennings says. No matter, the British intended to settle middle America too — on their own time.

In fact, they had already approved plans to establish a 14th colony, Vandalia, beyond the mountains.

At any rate, the fighting that ensued was the nastiest of the war. Atrocity was no stranger to either side.

Colonial Indian Fighter George Rogers Clark supposedly secured the entire Northwest Territory by capturing Vincennes, an Indiana outpost on the Wabash and an Indian supply base, in February 1779. That May Gen. John Sullivan, dispatched by Washington to retaliate for massacres in Pennsylvania and New York, broke the back of the Iroquois Confederation or the Six Nations in a scorched earth campaign through western New York. He leveled 40 windian villages.

Early in the war the Cherokees were brought to heel in the South after attacks on the frontiers of Virginia and the Carolinas.

But the Americans lacked the strength to exploit their gains and consolidate control.

In the view of Prof. John Shy of the University of Michigan, a visiting professor at the Army War College in Carlisle, Pa. expert in the Revolution, Clark's victories were hollow.

Moreover, he said, the Americans couldn't take the arc of waterways formed by the upper Mississippi, the Ohio and the Great Lakes so strategically important to western dominion.

In that light the Anglo-Indian effort held the west for the King. But the King, or at least Parliament, didn't seem to care. When the Treaty of Paris was signed in 1783 formally ending the war no reference was made to the aborigines. Their territory was ceded to the United States.

The Iroquois were destroyed politically, the Cherokees were beaten, the other tribes like the Shawnee just tried to stay out of the way, Shy says.

White western expansion was inevitable, no matter which side won — and no one could find a punctuation mark to end the war.

In 1786, at what is now Rome, N.Y., the Six Nations signed a separate treaty, but the fighting and land grabbing went on. In 1794, Gen. Anthony Wayne won the battle of Fallen Timbers, near what is now Toledo, Ohio. It was the last big battle, at least for a while.

When the great Seneca chief, C rnstalk, visited President Washington some years after the Revolution, he could not forget the Indian caught in the white man's mill.

"When your army entered the country of the Six Nations," Cornstalk said, "we called you the Town Destroyer; and to this day, when that name is heard, our women look behind them and turn pale, and our children cling close to the necks of their mothers."

Prayer

"Do your best to add goodness to your faith; to your goodness add knowledge; to your knowledge add self-control." (II Peter 1:5-6, TEV)

Prayer: Lord God, please grant that we may show our faith in such a way that the goodness of it may reach to our neighbors. Help us, Father. We pray in the name of Jesus. Amen.

Correction

HAYTI--The hospital report in Saturday's edition of The Daily Standard incorrectly stated that Mrs. Ruth Vandiver of Portageville was released from Pemiscot County Memorial Medical Center with a baby boy.

Mrs. Vandiver was released from the hospital, but she was in the hospital for treatment of pneumonia, not to have a baby.
